Buy Now, Buy American.
Three Days of Leisure.
Purifying Germany.
Something to Pronounce.

—By ARTHUR BRISBANE—

THE Buy Now and Buy American campaign in the W. R. Hearst newspapers has started.

One million five hundred thousand volunteer workers will join in the drive for immediate and universal buying asked by Industrial Administrator Hugh S. Johnson.

Retail prices are still low. They will not remain low. Buying now, you save money, and, what is more important, you promote recovery.

Those that should know agree that this month of September will be the last month of low prices. So, buy now, buy things made in America, and make sure that you are getting them.

THE "LONG HOLIDAY," three days in which to play, sleep, and "do what you will," as the labor unions put it, begins today.

Some will return in three days with only a coat of tan and a memory of "really good beer." A few will come back with plans made for fighting their own particular section of the depression, and for using usefully the leisure that is to become more and more plentiful, at least until we get back to normal.

Those few will be the fortunate few.

THE CABLE continues announcement of Hitler plans for "purification of the Germanic race." Only old-fashioned dances, waltz, galop, quadrille will be permitted.

Modern dances, called "American and thoroughly un-German," fox trot, one step, tango are banned. To dance them is "unpatriotic."

IN THE city of Worms, according to a dispatch printed in the New York Times, this happened, quoted from a German newspaper:

"A Jew, Walther Lieberg, maintained relations with a Christian girl. The girl's mother did nothing to terminate these relations, but suffered them. The Christian girl took the ground that the new government could not interfere with her private life.

"To enlighten these people and bring home to them the heinousness of their conduct, a detachment of Hitler guards paraded the Jew, his sweetheart and her mother through the streets of Kassel."

Parading the "Christian mother" through the streets is an interesting touch.

OUR NEW Ambassador to Poland, first foreign envoy to enter Poland through a Polish port, aboard a Polish ship, landed on the liner Kosciuszko, much touched to hear Polish school children of Gdynia singing "The Star-Spangled Banner" in English.

Mr. Cudahy said:

"My first job will be to learn the Polish language, to get in touch with the people."

It is well known that:

"Hope for a season bade the world farewell,
"And freedom shriek'd as Kosciuszko fell."

Ambassador Cudahy will probably shriek several times before he conquers the Polish language. For instance, Kosciuszko was born in Mereczowszczyno.

How soon will the Ambassador learn to pronounce that? It makes Welsh seem simple.

SINCE THE great Kosciuszko is mentioned, it seems appropriate, now, while everybody is economizing on schools, to mention the fact that before he died Kosciuszko, emancipating his serfs, insisted on the maintenance of schools on his estates that had been set free.

THERE APPEARS, here and there, some inclination to "bait" Henry Ford because he has not yet announced adhesion to NRA.

It would be a mistake for NRA to give the impression that it wishes to bully or threaten anybody. This country had enough mountebank demonstration during the Liberty Loan war sales, with golden-haired ladies singing on the backs of elephants and other hysteria.

IN THE case of Mr. Ford various things should be remembered.

First, he established the automobile industry of the United States on a gigantic basis. Without him that industry, as it now exists, would NOT exist, and NRA wouldn't be worrying about it.

Second, Henry, of his own free will, established the highest wages that his industry had ever known and repeatedly increased them. Thanks to him, workingmen of Detroit and scores of other cities in the United States have received hundreds of millions in wages, including some hundreds of millions of extra dollars that they would never have seen had there been no Henry Ford.

SUCH A man is entitled to some consideration, including freedom from bullying, and doubtless President Roosevelt and Gen. Johnson will give orders to that effect.

Mr. Ford's statement, "I always thought that to manage a business you should know something about it," need not excite too great indignation in the official mind.

Henry Ford says it. The official mind little suspects how many others THINK it.

LONDON AT this moment possesses more gold than ever before, and is paying for it the highest price on record, 130 shillings 8½ pence.

This country, which buys gold, if at all, with seventy-cent paper dollars, has arranged to let all the gold mined in the United States be shipped abroad.

Some Americans cannot yet understand why American gold is too good for Americans at home, but not too good to be sent to Canada, France or Timbuctoo.

LINER RAMS FREIGHTER IN STORM AT SEA

S. S. President Wilson Damaged, Heads To Port

By DAVID P. SENTNER
International News Service.

NEW YORK, Sept. 2.—A gallant and efficient rescue at sea was recorded today following the collision of the Dollar Liner President Wilson with the freighter Coldwater during a sudden cloudburst 80 miles south of Cape Hatteras at 11 p. m., last night.

The freighter burst into flames and sank within an hour.

Despite the damage to the passenger liner, those aboard the burning freighter—including one woman passenger, two children and the crew of 33 men—were taken off by the President Wilson.

Orders were received by the liner from its offices in New York to proceed to Newport News for repairs.

Capt. Makepeace Ridley, master of the President Wilson, told the story of the collision and rescue in a radio message to International News Service today. He wirelessed that his ship, her bows damaged, was limply safely toward port and expected to arrive some time this evening.

HULL CRUSHED

A secondary report of the collision, received at the Dollar Line offices here from Capt. Ridley, reported that the lower part of the liner's stem had been carried away in the collision and that there was 20 feet of water in hold No. 1, punctured in the crash.

The liner was rounding Cape Hatteras, one of the notorious graveyards of the Atlantic Ocean, when an unexpected cloudburst of rain broke over the vessel.

The ship nosed slowly through the fog, torrents of rain and treacherous waters.

When the crash came, the cargo on the deck and in the holds of the freighter caught fire immediately.

By the light of the raging flames which swept through the freighter,

Dies in Takeoff

FRANCESCO DE PINEDO

Gen. de Pinedo, famous Italian flier who today met flaming death when his huge plane crashed at Brooklyn as he tried to take off to fly to Bagdad.

FORD, COAL MAR NRA OUTLOOK

WASHINGTON, Sept. 2.—(AP.)—A new rift in soft coal negotiations today joined reticent Henry Ford as twin disturbers of NRA's first week-end rest.

Conferences on labor contracts between Appalachian bituminous coal operators and the United Mine Workers of America were at so complete a standstill that the advice of Hugh S. Johnson again was sought by the disputants.

But in the case of Ford, NRA officials simply waited word from the Detroit manufacturer, who has until Tuesday to accept the automobile code or do business without the Blue Eagle.

Both problems were paralleled by two events hailed as recovery achievements:

The $12,000,000,000 oil industry's code today became effective.

The American Federation of Labor attributed to the recovery program a $5,000,000,000 increase in purchasing power—an amount sufficient to raise retail sales 17 per cent.

Today provided NRA's first taste of its own fewer-work-hours doctrine. Johnson, who says his staff has worked on a "30-hour day," ordered all offices closed at 1 o'clock, not to reopen until Tuesday morning. But everybody expected some exceptions to the rule,

FLIER KILLED IN SEA HOP TAKEOFF

Italian Hero Burned To Death as Ship Crashes in N. Y.

BROOKLYN, N. Y., Sept. 2.—(AP.)—Gen. Francesco de Pinedo, one of Italy's most famous airmen, met flaming death shortly after dawn today when his huge plane crashed and burned up at the start of a take-off for Bagdad, Iraq.

A tremendous load of gasoline, 1,027 gallons, caused his giant red, green and purple plane to swerve from a concrete runway and hit a fence at Floyd Bennett Airport. In a second it was a roaring mass of flames, and the flier was burned beyond recognition.

The start of what the gallant flier had hoped would be a nonstop record flight became a scene of horror. Spectators shuddered and covered their eyes as they saw fire engulf the airman.

Attendants rushed to the scene and tried to pull him out, but the flames forced them back. Michael Hicks Beach, a naval machinist's mate, was badly burned about the face trying to reach de Pinedo with a fire extinguisher.

MASS OF WRECKAGE

The plane burned only a few seconds before it was a mass of metal wreckage. The body was found lying beside it and flield officials said that the flier had jumped and attempted to crawl away before the fire killed him.

De Pinedo's plan was traveling about 70 miles an hour when it hit the steel wire fence at 7:02 a. m. (Pittsburgh time).

He had covered about 2,000 feet of the mile-long concrete runway before disaster overtook him. The plane, lurching under its great load of fuel, refused to rise. One wheel got off the ground but fell back, then the plane swerved into the dirt along the runway.

De Pinedo, going perhaps 100 miles an hour, got the craft back to the concrete again, but a moment later it swerved again and dashed toward the fence as de

Rome Mourns Death Of Pinedo in N. Y.

ROME, Sept. 2.—(AP.)—Rome learned with great regret of the death of Gen. Francesco de Pinedo in New York today in the take-off of his projected hop to Bagdad. The Air Ministry communicated the news to Gen. Balbo, who is on vacation after his mass flight to Chicago and back.

Although de Pinedo had practically disappeared from public view, he still was regarded in air circles as a most competent flier. It was believed that the body would be brought to Italy and given funeral honors.

WOUNDED YEGG SUSPECT DIES

Shot as he attempted to escape from city detectives in front of the North Side Police Station, Raymond English, alias Jack Norman, suspected safe cracker, died early today in Allegheny General Hospital. English received his wound Thursday a short time after his arrest for Parkersburg (W. Va.) authorities.

A few hours before his death, Marguerite Bosley, 20, of Baltimore, "girl friend" of English, was arrested and taken to Parkersburg for questioning.

English was shot through the abdomen by Detective Harry Foster when he bolted from a detective radio cruiser in crowded Federal street.

Three alleged accomplices are being held in Parkersburg. According to police they are Oscar Stemmler and Harry Thornburg, of the North Side, and John Lang, of Fairmont, W. Va.

Mussolini Signs Pact With Soviet

LONDON, Sept. 2.—(AP.)—Reuter's News Agency reported from Rome that Premier Mussolini today signed a pact of neutrality and non-aggression with Soviet Russia.

War Measures for War on Crime

GEORGE H. DERN, Secretary of War, speaking under the auspices of the United States Flag Association, says that there is "a scarlet army of crime in the United States invading the domestic tranquility of our people, invading the security of our homes, and confiscating our property."

The estimable Secretary says that these conditions are "due to the indifference of the American people."

The Secretary concludes by urging that patriotic citizens join in waging war on the army of crime as vigorously as the Americans of 1776 fought for freedom.

The Secretary's remarks are of course well intended but they amount to nothing more or less than a political alibi.

Existing criminal conditions are NOT due to the indifference of the American people. They are due to the inefficiency of American government.

The American people are not supposed to take the criminal situation into their own hands and to attempt to solve it by private action, which can be nothing other than lynch law.

The American people elect their governments, —city, state, and national,—to represent them in the enactment of law AND IN THE ENFORCEMENT OF LAW.

If the governments so elected fail to be efficient, the representatives of these governments cannot escape responsibility by passing the buck back to the American people.

THE AMERICAN PUBLIC is sufficiently aroused over the criminal situation.

They are MORE than aroused. They are INTENSELY DISTURBED over the situation, and they are particularly disturbed over the inability of their elected and duly authorized public officials to cope with the situation.

It is a plain evasion of the essential facts for the Secretary of War to urge the creation of a "strong public sentiment for the enforcement of law, a public sentiment that will give our law enforcement officers the support they need BUT ARE NOT NOW GETTING."

There is NOW a strong public sentiment for the enforcement of law.

There is now a strong public sentiment over THE FAILURE OF GOVERNMENT TO ENFORCE THE LAW.

There is such a strong public sentiment in favor of public officials courageous enough and capable enough to enforce the law, that unless the incumbent public officials perform their duty without further alibis and evasions, there will be a strong public sentiment in favor of replacing these recalcitrant officials with a more capable and conscientious lot.

It is nothing less than hooey of the most transparent kind for an important public official like Secretary Dern to say that the law enforcement officers are not now getting the support they need, and that this is the reason why government is not getting the results in the suppression of crime which the public demands.

WHAT CAN THE American public do that it is not doing?

It cannot take the execution of the law, the enforcement of justice, into its own hands.

That would be lawlessness, not law enforcement.

That would be breaking the law, not upholding it.

That would be aggravating the criminal situation, not diminishing it.

Lynch law is as much of a crime as other forms of violence.

The public did their full duty when they supported laws which were supposed to be effective, and when they elected officials who were supposed to be courageous and competent.

Succeeding procedure lies in the lap of the government.

TAXPAYER MAKES NEW CHARGE

E. Pittsburgher Freed Under $1,500 Bail Pending Hearing

A new prosecution was lodged today against Paul Orris, former East Pittsburgh Borough Clerk, who pleaded guilty and was paroled in Criminal Court on a charge of embezzling $3,400 of borough funds.

Acting as a taxpayer, Harry C. Clark, of 329 Beech street, East Pittsburgh, made information charging Orris with fraudulent conversion of $160 before Justice of the Peace George B. Shields, of Wilkinsburg, last night. Orris was arrested and released on $1,500 bond pending a hearing next Friday night.

After Orris was paroled, Borough Councilman Claire Flasher took Borough Solicitor Sidney Gottlieb to task because Council was not notified when Orris was arraigned in Criminal Court. Gottlieb said the prosecution was entirely in the hands of the District Attorney.

Councilman Emil Stitmatter said today an audit showed a shortage of $3,912.25 in borough funds and unpaid bills of $52,000 dating back as far as 1928. Coal bills were paid twice, according to the report, he said, and one bill for six trips to Pittsburgh amounted to $42.

Stitmatter said a meeting of taxpayers and property owners was held last Tuesday when the auditors' report was read. He added that Clark's charge was based on the information received at the meeting.

The information charged Orris received $160 in taxes from the Bell Telephone Company and converted the money t his own use.

Women Launch Appeal To 'Buy, Make Jobs'

The drive to "Buy in September," the big push which is expected to send the NRA over the top of business recovery, was launched last night by the leader of the four-minute women.

Mrs. Oliver J. Haller, chairman of the women's NRA auxiliary of the Pittsburgh district, spoke over WCAE and WJAS. Expressing as her belief that buying now—"spending a dollar and making a job"—would form the foundation for business recovery, she told of the canvass of thousands of women to get consumers to buy under the Blue Eagle.

She was introduced by Louis L. Kaufman, the Sun-Telegraph Globe Trotter.

Under the leadership of Mrs. Haller and Miss Helen Grimes, chairman of the auxilary speakers' committee, the four-minute women will aid the campaign to "Buy in September."

Others to add their comment were:

M. S. Tighe, international president of the Amalgamated Association of Iron, Steel and Tin Workers:

"I am quite optimistic about a 'Buy Now' campaign. If we can get the people who have money to spend it now, it will not be long until everybody will have a job."

A. Patrick Flood, manager of the East Liberty Chamber of Commerce:

"A dollar spent today will be equal to $1.25 in 30 days and $1.50 in 60 days at the present rate wages are going up. It's up to the selfish interest of everybody to purchase at the present time and to have the satisfaction of helping to start the wheels to turning again."

Jessie C. Stewart, of the Jessie C. Stewart Company, Aiken avenue:

"I think it's a good movement with good psychology and that the NRA will eventually work out."

ROOSEVELT'S LABOR POLICY TENDS TO WIDEN NRA SPLIT

JOHNSON AIDE OPPOSES STAND

2 Men, Long Friends, Vigorously Explain 'Disagreement'

By WILLIAM S. NEAL
International News Service

WASHINGTON, Sept. 2.—The National Recovery Administration's policy of neutrality between non-union industry and organized labor will stand unchanged unless altered by President Roosevelt himself.

This was assured today as statements of administrator Hugh S. Johnson and Dudley Cates, who resigned as deputy for industry in a protest against the labor policy disclosed that President Roosevelt has chartered this path.

The split between Johnson and Cates, however, widened as the two men, long firm friends, explained with some vigor the causes of their disagreement.

While the Recovery Administration seethed with discussion of the split between the two high officials, further reports of the nation-wide campaign to pledge employers and consumers to the movement were declared to be encouraging. These reports, it was estimated unofficially, show that 85 to 90 per cent of the employers of the nation will come under the blue eagle.

The controversy between Johnson and Cates also disclosed the extent of the dissension over the General's labor policy.

A delegation of New York industrialists, Cates said, called upon him this week to seek assurances that organized labor would not be permitted to force unionization of their plants.

Both Johnson and Cates agreed theoretically that "vertical" unions should replace the present craft basis of the American Federation of Labor, but Johnson holds he has no power to act under the law.

Cates charged that organizers of the American Federation of Labor have intimidated workers, to the extent of beating them, to force them into unions.

But Johnson, he declared, holds that there is "no way to meet the realities of this situation by powers that lie within his administrative discretion." Cates said:

"Gen. Johnson's statement that he is carrying out 'a decided policy of the President' closes the discussion as far as I am concerned."

Cates maintained that the NRA would succeed in its mission, despite his disagreement with policies.

Having worked his organization at top speed for weeks, Johnson declared a holiday from 1 p. m. today until Tuesday morning. He plans to fly to Chicago to make a Labor Day speech.

20,000 HERE SIGN NRA

More than 20,000 employers in the Pittsburgh postoffice territory, including about 95 per cent of the downtown businessmen, have given their support to the Blue Eagle forces.

In addition to 18,725 who have signed certificates of compliance at the postoffice, hundreds of others have qualified at the local NRA headquarters in the Chamber of Commerce Building, according to Frank C. Harper, secretary-manager.

Former Gov. John S. Fisher, chairman of the recovery campaign committee, in commending the volunteer "sales" army that complete its NRA selling campaign yesterday, stressed the need of a buyers' campaign.

Three thousand Pittsburgh district employes of the Aluminum Company of America will be affected by the temporary code presented by the Association of Manufacturers in the Aluminum Industry and signed by Gen. Hugh S. Johnson, according to a company announcement.

The temporary code, pending aproval of a permanent basic code, provides for a 42-hour week for employes on continuous processes and a 40-hour week for all other employes. The minimum wages fixed by it are 35 cents an hour for men and 30 cents for women on manufacturing operations in the northern sections.

The Postmaster General arrived by plane from Kansas City, enthusiastic over a conference of young Democrats he had attended there. The conference, he said, had still further strengthened his faith in the wholehearted backing the country was prepared to give the President.

Hurricane Spreads Death And Ruin in Cuba

HAVANA, Sept. 2.—(AP.)—A swift, fierce hurricane visited its wrath on the western Pinar Del Rio province today after causing at least seven deaths and 64 injuries and uncounted property losses in three west-central Cuban states.

As communication lines were repaired reports came from communities of shattered houses, broken power lines and damaged crops.

STORM NICKS FLORIDA

MIAMI, Fla., Sept. 2.—(AP.)—The passing of a storm that nicked the tip of the Florida Peninsula and lashed at Cuba was followed today by word of four ships aground, one damaged by collision and reports of another disturbance moving over the Caribbean.

Florida felt gales at Key West and winds up to 29 miles an hour yesterday at Miami.

The new tropical disturbance was reported about 170 miles northeast of Puerto Rico and moving west or northwest. Advices from the weather bureau said it was of at least moderate intensity.

Word of ships in distress in Cuban waters came in intercepted wireless messages last night. The Josephine Gray, British vessel, was reported ashore at Cayo Bahia del Cadiz, but with the crew safe.

The Stahl, a Danish ship, broke anchor at Caibarien Bay, 200 miles east of Havana, struck and slightly damaged the Swedish ship the Consul Corfitzon, and then settled in nine feet of water. Five Billion Increase In Buying Power Credited to NRA particularly in view of the new coal troubles.

The present tieup clouded hopes of putting written agreement in President Roosevelt's hands Tuesday and revived talk that a code may be imposed upon the soft coal industry.

The oil code started functioning officially with the industry's planning and co-ordinating committee reported as favoring federal price fixing from the well-mouth to the gasoline pump. This recommendation has yet to reach Secretary Ickes, oil administrator.

In its monthly survey of business, the American Federation said that "since the speculative rise of business was checked in July, figures are beginning to reveal a solid foundation for business advance.' It added that from March to July 2,033,000 persons returned to work, resulting in the latter month in a 4 per cent increase in department store sales over July, 1932.

A memorandum from Joseph B. Eastman, federal co-ordinator, told President Roosevelt that an NRA code for the much-regulated railroads, "would not be wise even if it were legally applicable."

In Cleveland, A. F. Whitney, chairman of the Railway Labor Executives' Association, expressed "disappointment and shock" and promised immediate steps "to have the railroad working day shortened without a reduction in wages."

Still going forward at NRA headquarters today were negotiations from which administrators hoped to evolve for presidential signature next week a code covering the entire retail trade field.

Gasoline Price Boost Seen as Oil Adopts Code

WASHINGTON, Sept. 2.—(AP.)—An upward skip in gasoline costs was a possibility for the American motorist today as the giant oil industry officially began to operate under NRA's blue eagle along a pathway pointing toward rigid federal price and production control.

Toiling throughout most of the night, leaders of the industry smoothed up their recommendations for Secretary Ickes, the oil administrator, while their trade code took effect and brought the $12,000,000,000 business fully into the recovery campaign.

The basic suggestion from industrial leaders forming the planning and co-ordinating committee was understood to include an appeal to President Roosevelt to fix prices from the source to the automobile.

This recommendation stipulated that the President might prescribe the maximum prices the consumer could be charged, with industry authorities indicating privately their plan would hike retail gasoline prices from one to three cents a gallon. Even without complete price fixing it was indicated a similar increase could be expected to meet increased production costs.

ing to do, but what is the government which the public elected going to do?

If Secretary Dern has any plans for suppressing the "scarlet army of crime," let him state them, and not indulge in irrelevant rhetoric.

The American people KNOW that there is an "army of four hundred thousand men and women in the United States who make their living mostly through crime."

The American people KNOW all about the kidnapings and the racketeerings and the machine gun killings.

The American people KNOW that this army of crime is "invading the security of our homes and confiscating our property."

What the American people WANT TO KNOW from Secretary Dern, if they want to hear from Secretary Dern at all, is what Secretary Dern plans to do about the situation, what his War Department is going to do, if anything, about dispersing this foreign army,—"foreign to everything that is really American"—what is the federal government as a whole going to do about it?

IF THAT INTREPID warrior, Secretary Dern, has not any definite plans, Gen. Butler has some very valuable proposals.

Let the Secretary call in Gen. Butler and listen to his plans, and support them.

They are definite and drastic. The situation needs something definite and drastic instead of a lot of attenuated atmosphere of the political variety.

"The scarlet army of crime" has already captured a large part of the people's army of law enforcement.

It has already occupied a limited section of the people's citadel of defense, the judiciary.

Senator Copeland's investigation is discovering that a considerable number of the political organizations of the country are in league with this "scarlet army of crime," and protect the criminals enlisted in it.

Ordinary processes of law and law enforcement, and conviction under the law, and the infliction of penalties under the law, are not therefore going to defeat this "scarlet army of crime."

What does a nation usually do when it is invaded by "a foreign army?"

It declares martial law, and proceeds to deal with traitors according to the drastic provisions of that code.

What should the American government do when the country is occupied by "a foreign army," "foreign to everything that is really American," a foreign army estimated at four hundred thousand, more than three times the size of the regular army of the United States," "an army that is operating in this country, invading the domestic tranquility of our people, invading the security of our homes, and confiscating our property?"

An American government should declare martial law and exterminate "the scarlet army," and eliminate every traitor to American institutions and to the peace and safety of the American people who is allied with the "scarlet army."

The ordinary processes of law are not equal to the situation.

Evasions and alibis from distinguished secretaries do not meet the necessities of the case.

What is needed is action, and drastic action, on the part of the government in whose hands the people of the United States have reposed their interests.

GEN. BUTLER has proposed a plan.

The American Legion has offered its services.

If the United States government will accept these services, adopt this plan, and with the cooperation of the governors of the separate states proceed against the invading enemy by means of martial law, we will soon see victory gained, and peace and order restored, and a sufficient number of traitors to American institutions shot at sunrise.

Oratorical references to 1776 are admirable in their way but their special pertinence lies in the well known fact that the revolution of '76 was a protest against a government which was incompetent and ineffective and neglectful of its plain duties to the people of America whose interests it was supposed to protect.

Woman Scores First Hit In Sleep Plague Fight

ST. LOUIS, Sept. 2.—(AP.)—Discovery by a woman pathologist of the presence of a filterable virus in the bodies of "sleeping sickness" victims was acclaimed today as the first important finding in science's effort to seek a cause or cure for the puzzling disease which has taken 55 lives here in the last five weeks.

The woman is Dr. Margaret G. Smith, assistant professor of pathology at the Washington University School of Medicine, and a graduate of Johns Hopkins.

Her finding were announced at a meeting last night of the St. Louis Medical Society.

Dr. Howard McCordock, Washington University pathologist, who announced Dr. Smith's laboratory findings, said it had long been suspected such a virus was responsible for the strange malady, but that Dr. Smith's discovery was the first scientific proof.

Determination that the disease is caused by such a virus, Dr. McCordock asserted, does not isolate the cause of encephalitis, but said it narrowed the search materially.

County Investigators End Assessment Probe Today

The last of the 4,000 phantoms, placed on the poll tax assessment books during the recent special assessment made by the county, were to be eliminated today, Leo A. Riordan, chief county investigator, stated. He said that his 60 investigators would complete their work today after having checked on more than 10,000 persons assessed during the special sittings of 30 deputy assessors.

The work of the assessors is still to be continued, Riordan said, as each day hundreds of additional assessments are being made at the Court House where residents from all parts of the county are coming to be made eligible for the primaries the nineteenth of this month. The office of the Board of Assessment and Revision of Taxes will close at noon today, but will be open all day Tuesday and Wednesday, the last days to be assessed.

Those who make affidavits on or before September 8 will be given until September 16 to pay their taxes.

Riordan made known today that the assessments in the Fifth Ward, the Hill district, had increased 15,319 since the 1932 registration. This increase he said, is the largest jump in any single ward in the city. Investigation of the new assessments have already resulted in 971 names being stricken from the list and Riordan said that it is likely that another 500 will be cut off the rolls before primary day.

Among the reports received by Riordan yesterday from the First Ward were that attempts had been made to assess three voters from a vacant hotel in the Boulevard of the Allies and three more from an empty loft building in First avenue. He also stated that two persons had given as their address a house in Forbes street which had collapsed several weeks ago.

Six Held After Clash At $1.10 Farm Sale

Six men were in the county jail today awaiting a hearing on charges of inciting to riot after Sheriff's deputies charged they participated in the halting of a forced sale of stock at the farm tenanted by Abraham Omar, William Penn highway, Patton Township, yesterday.

Part of a mob of unemployed, estimated by Deputy Sheriff B. L. Schugar at 1,000, the men are alleged to have forced Schugar to accept their bid of $1.10 to satisfy a judgment note of $1,327 held by Mrs. Annie McGregor, 70-year-old owner of the farm.

To avoid violence, Schugar pretended to accept their bid and advised them to take their hastily-drawn bill of sale to the Courthouse for certification. There they were arrested and taken before Alderman Thomas M. Geary. Bail in such cases, according to the District Attorney's office, is set at $2,500.

Not expecting any trouble, Schugar said he took his wife and Mrs. McGregor to the farm, where a few persons appeared. Suddenly, he related, hundreds of people came from behind barns and trees and milled about angrily.

147 INTERNES STAGE 'WALKOUT' AFTER OUSTER OF MATES

3 SUSPENDED IN DEATH OF 2 PATIENTS

N. Y. Hospital Silent As Staff Snubs Scolding Chief

International News Service.

NEW YORK, Sept. 2.—Bellevue Hospital officials today maintained tight-lipped silence concerning internal dissension, manifested in the wake of suspension of three internes for alleged failure to provide adequate treatment for two patients who subsequently died.

The internes, Drs. H. L. Fulton, Dorothy Goetze and Albert N. Stevenson, Jr., were ordered suspended after the medical board of the hospital inquired into the case.

But when Dr. Beulah Rhoden, acting medical superintendent of the hospital, attempted a public reprimand of the trio in the hospital dining hall last night before 147 other internes, the entire group rose from the table and marched out of the hall in disapproving silence.

INTERNES SNUB CHIEF

Dr. Rhoden, left facing the empty room, was speechless and followed the internes a moment later.

Whether hospital authorities would attempt to discipline the internes for the silent snub of their superior could not be learned today.

The cases involving the three suspended internes were those of Norman Frankel, 9, and Edward J. Sullivan.

The Frankel boy complained of a stomach pain and an ambulance from Bellevue was sent to his home, the medical board said. Dr. Fulton diagnosed the boy's trouble as an inflammation of the intestines and recommended a liquid diet. A second call, the board said, brought Dr. Goetze. She made the same diagnosis. Later a private physician took the boy to Bellevue, where he was operated on immediately for a ruptured appendix and later died.

'LACK OF JUDGMENT'

Dr. Stevenson, the board said, attended an ambulance call to Sullivan's home and diagnosed an illness as gastritis. A few days later Sullivan was taken to the hospital, operated on and an intestinal obstruction was found. He died also.

Dr. Carl Burdick, chairman of the medical board, said a full inquiry satisfied the board the physicians diagnosed the illness satisfactorily and that "their error was due to lack of experience rather than any neglect. It was a case of lack of judgment, and we feel both patients should have been hospitalized sooner."

FLIER KILLED IN TAKEOFF

A crowd of 200 people who had got up in the middle of the night to see the take-off and who had cheered de Pinedo as he stepped carefree into the plane, stood whitefaced as the charred body was carried to the Navy's sick bay at the field.

The plane, which was red with green and purple stripes encircling it, had been groomed for weeks by the flier with the help of his technical adviser and backer, Ugo d'Annunzio, son of the famous poet, Gabriel d'Annunzio.

With a smile the flier, who had followed the skyways to thousands on thousands of miles to far corners of the earth, told of his "gadgets" shortly before the take-off. He had equipped the cockpit with a device which would sound a siren and slap water into his face if the plane got off its course while he was snatching 40 winks high above the Atlantic.

CONFIDENT AT START

He also had five balloon kites with which to signal to ships if the craft was forced down at sea, but his confident manner as he started the take-off indicated that bad luck was far from his mind.

D'Annunzio, speaking with white face and tears in his eyes, said after the crash:

"Of course, when you start to sway in a plane everyone knows that the farther you go the worse it gets. I thought sure he would cut the switch, but he had been here so long, he was determined to go.

"I think he still thought he could lift the load even though he had got off the runway."

By flying the 6,300 miles to Bagdad, de Pinedo had hoped to smash the long distance record of 5,653½ miles, set by Paul Codos and Maurice Rossi in a flight last month from New York to Rayak, Syria.

As he stepped into the plane, clad in an old gray jersey and blue house slippers, his last words were:

"I shall try to do my best."

Maj. J. Nelson Kelly, manager of Floyd Bennett Field, said after the crash:

"Undoubtedly too much of a load caused the plane to skid."

De Pinedo was considered by many airmen as Italy's best long-distance flier. He retired last year from the Italian army, in which he rose to chief of staff for aviation and garnered every citation possible for a flier. In 1927 he won laurels by piloting a flying boat from Rome to the African coast, thence to Brazil and the United States.

While refueling in Arizona his ship was destroyed when a spectator tossed a match into the gasoline. He procured a new one, however, and flew the Atlantic from New York back to Rome. Two years earlier he made a trip from Italy to Australia, to Japan, to China, to India and return.

LAMSON'S MAID NOT AT TRIAL

SAN JOSE, Cal., Sept. 2.—(AP.)—In the face of the state's circumstantial evidence designed to convict David A. The state suddenly rested yesterday. The trial will be resumed Tuesday.

There was some indication the state had not yet presented all its evidence. Just before the prosecution rested it introduced a cross section drawing of the bathroom, scene of the tragedy. Also the prosecution has not yet called Clara Malwitz, a former nurse maid for the Lamsons, who had been quoted as saying there had been quarrels in the home.

CALL EXPERTS TO FREE DEER

WATKINS GLEN, N. Y., Sept. 2.—(AP.)—When it comes to rescuing a deer from a precarious mountain ledge, the experts in wild animal life admit they are practically stumped.

Frank Edminster, animal expert of the State Conservation Department, ordered from his laboratories at Cornell University to Watkins Glen State Park to remove a seven-point buck from eight days of captivity, arrived at the scene early today. He said:

"I have no definite plans."

All plans to rescue the animal were held up while Edminster and Gardner Bump, state superintendent of game, decided what they would do.

Park authorities last night were preparing to try to lure the deer across a bridge by the use of an illegal "jack-light" and two stuffed deer equipped with rollers. They suspended their work when informed that the state was sending its game experts.

A record influx of tourists over the double week-end holiday was expected by park officials.

THRONGS AWAIT ARMY PLANES AT FAIR

Volunteer Firemen's Parade Among Day's Features

The volunteer firemen of Allegheny County had their brass work all shined up today for a county fair parade, while the crowds at South Park scanned the skies for Army planes that are slated to do their stuff along with the visiting firemen.

It was Volunteer Firemen's Day, and more than a hundred companies ready to show off shared honors with six Army pursuit planes of the 8th Pursuit Group, Langley Field, Va., as attractions of the day.

With the County Fair thus far proving to be just about as big an attraction as has been seen hereabouts, announcement was made that the exhibitions will be open tomorrow.

ARMY PLANES FEATURE

Besides the Army planes, scheduled to arrive at the County Airport at noon, and the volunteer firemen, there are band concerts, Boy Scout demonstrations, exhibitions of horsemanship, a polo game and fireworks on today's program.

The Army planes will base partly at the county port and partly at Rodgers Field. They will fly over the County Fair Grounds this afternoon and tomorrow afternoon. They are flown chiefly by pilots from Pittsburgh and vicinity.

The visit of the planes was made possible through arrangements between Maj. Byron Q. Jones, commander of the group, and Maj. Hal Bazeley, manager of the County Airport.

Pilots comprising the flight are Lieuts. Guy B. Henderson, Pete Brewster, George Youngerman, Tom Schofield, Ed Wittan and J. W. Williams, the last three having at one time made Pittsburgh their home.

70,000 ATTEND

Thousands of visitors milled around the spacious grounds from before noon until midnight yesterday, while thousands of motor cars jammed the highways for miles in all directions. Park officials estimated that the crowd yesterday was in excess of 70,000.

Highway patrolmen, county police, National Guardsmen and police from the city and several boroughs helped keep the vehicles moving. As early as 2 p. m. yesterday Brownsville road was blocked from the park to Broughton and the usual 20-minute ride from the city to the park became a two-hour monotonous drag.

PARK AUTOS IN MEADOWS

All the available parking space at the park was filled early in the afternoon and every nearby picnic grove and meadow soon was being used for parking the vehicles.

The program went ahead without interruption yesterday, with the National Guardsmen firing a 21-gun salute to start off the activities. There were horse races, jumping of hurdles and special contests for the more skilled riders. Pittsburgh mounted traffic officers and the county mounties gave an exhibition of riding.

Two polo games also were on the bill with the crowds that jammed the 25,000 grandstand seats giving much applause to the riders as they galloped up and down the new athletic field.

Last night there was a display of fireworks and after the program it took several hours to direct the visitors from their parking places.

Political Speechmaking Banned on Fair Grounds

Any political office seeker who attempts to speak at the County Fair in the interests of his candidacy will be thrown bodily off the lot, County Commissioner C. C. McGovern today stated.

Scores En Route to Fair See Truck Kill Cyclist

Scores of persons motoring to South Park to the County Fair, witnessed the death of Harry Bishop, 28, of 425 Selma street, who was thrown from his motorcycle in front of a truck and killed late yesterday afternoon in Sawmill Run boulevard, near Bausman street.

A side car on Bishop's cycle sideswiped the machien driven by Lewis J. Grant, 29, of 912 South Trenton avenue, Wilkinsburg, and Bishop was thrown beneath a truck driven by Stanley Spara, 26, of 2408 Lezanon street.

Flier's Fight With Death In Flames Described

International News Service.

NEW YORK, Sept. 2.—"He was burned alive. We stood there and watched him, but we could do nothing to save him."

That was the eye-witness account of the death of Gen. Francesco di Pinedo, Italian flier, who was killed this morning attempting to take off on a non-stop flight to Bagdad, as given today by Alfred Stuart, International News Service correspondent at Floyd Bennett Field. Stuart said:

"After his plane crashed, we ran toward it, saw it was in flames and then looked for the general. We could see him trying to climb out—three times he made an effort to get free of the tangle and finally the third time was successful, but he fell on the ground beside his ship and did not move. He seemed to be dazed or stunned and probably was badly hurt in the crash.

"A cop and myself were the first to come near the flaming plane. We knew it was loaded with more than 1,000 gallons of gas, but we went up to about 250 feet from it. We were just going to make a final dash closer when a big tank of gas broke into flames and we could go no farther.

"Then when we looked again as the fire and smoke had died down after a terrific burst of flames—the general wasn't there. He was burned alive."

Claire, Her Love Cold, Hints New Read Affair

LOS ANGELES, Sept. 2.—(AP.)—To Claire Windsor, blonde actress, her love affair with Alfred C. Read, Jr., is "a forgotten romance."

The actress made the statement as she awaited the resumption next Wednesday of the trial of the $100,000 alienation of affections suit brought against her by Mrs. Marian Read, former wife of the Oakland broker.

Miss Windsor intimated her love faded long before the suit was filed against her and indicated that Read, who allegedly deceived her into believing he was unmarried when he first courted her, might have switched his affection to "someone else in Hollywood" before Mrs. Read brought the suit.

In her third day on the stand, the actress reiterated she had asked Read many times to return to his wife and children after she had learned Mrs. Read was not preparing to get a divorce.

She previously had testified that Read, after admitting to her he was married, said he and his wife were separated and that a divorce was contemplated. Mrs. Reed, however, did not obtain a divorce until after the suit was filed against the actress.

Most of yesterday's court session was devoted to the reading of love letters exchanged between Miss Windsor and Read.

The Story of Joseph -:- CHAPTER IX -:- Told in Pictures by Dan Smith

After three days Joseph had his 10 brothers taken from jail and brought before him; then he commanded them to bring Benjamin to him, and in the presence of the other brothers he had Simeon bound.

Joseph then sent his other brothers home to Canaan, with their sacks filled with corn and provisions for their journey; and without their knowledge he had their money restored to them, placed in the sacks.

On their way home the brothers opened the sacks to get provisions, and found the money in the mouths of the sacks. Amazed to find their money restored, their hearts failed them and they were afraid.

When they told their father all that had happened, Jacob cried out: "Me ye have bereaved of my children. Joseph is not, and Simeon is not, and ye will take Benjamin away." Jacob refused to let Benjamin go. (Continued next week.)

Globe-Trotting

By LOUIS L. KAUFMAN

Hello, Ladies and Gentlemen:

Am I flattered? Am I flattered? Florence, of Beaver, wanted to know the name of that tune I was humming before the broadcast the other night. She liked it. She never heard it before. I thought everybody knew Lazy Bones. (That's why I don't sing.)

An Evans City subscriber wants to know how to get to the County Fair after she arrives in Pittsburgh. Go through the Liberty Tunnels and turn left into Sawmill Run boulevard. Turn right on the Library road (Route 88) at Overbrook. It takes you to the park entrance. Big Hank, the corner officer at Fifth and Grant, will direct you to the tubes.

Mrs. E. M.—Don't know of anybody. Try a classified ad.

Mrs. Jamison—I heard that abrupt ending of the skit in the Whiteman-Jolson program. Others have asked me about it, too. Don't know for certain, but it appeared that the program was running overtime. Perhaps that's why we never did hear how the Children of Israel got away from Pharaoh's army at the Red Sea. Those things happen to the best of planned hours.

Mrs. Richard, loyal globe trotter is visiting the World's Fair. She says she misses her son Joseph and the Globe Trotter. Kinda makes me feel good way inside.

Cantor's Ballyhoo Held Premature, Durante, Ruth Etting Listed For Rubinoff Program

By AIRCASTER

That little something, which, proverbially, has brought fame down the ages to Denmark, seems to be eating into the Sunday night program on which Eddie Cantor was slated to return September 10. Whether Cantor's self-ballyhoo on the NRA extravaganza last Sunday has anything to do with the chaos regarding the future of the broadcasts, I don't know. But the radio wiseacres say it looks as if Mr. Cantor won't be back as he so optimistically promised last week—at least not within three months.

* * *

Bert Lahr, Lee Sims and Ilomay Bailey and Taylor Holmes say au revoir this Sunday, when Rubinoff and his violin depart for the West Coast. On the following Sabbath evening there'll be a new show around Rubinoff, notable for the absence of Cantor. Into the spotlight, the sapient sages of Hollywood report dutifully, will step Jimmy Durante and Ruth Etting.

HENRY ASSAILS MACHINES, URGES NEW DEAL FOR LABOR

DECLARES TAX BURDEN PUT ON WORKERS

A "new deal" for labor in Pittsburgh was advocated by John M. Henry, candidate for Democratic mayoralty nomination, in an address at Snodgrass School, Mt. Washington, last night.

The "new deal" will not reach the city while the political machines of the Republican and Democratic parties can prevent it, Henry said, continuing:

"The political machines, agents of wealth, are concerned with taking away labor's right to representation in law-making bodies. They are concerned with making sure the weight of taxation falls on labor and not on wealth."

ATTACKS UTILITY RATES

Henry flayed machine bosses for "the sales tax inquiry," which, he said, raised the price of poor men's bread and intensified the depression. Asserting that in the same way the poor man bears the burden of utility rates, he said:

"The millionaire may be worth a million times as much as you or I, but he can't use a million times as much gas and electricity."

Henry also hit at the blocking of the Old-Age Pensions bill, and the "compromise" on the coal and iron police after the Barcoski case. He said:

"Labor has no rights of its own. It is driven hither and yon by hirelings of powerful corporations. The machine even cheats the laborer out of his vote, setting one honest body of workingmen—the police and fire forces—against the others."

As proof of his sympathy with labor, Henry said he started work in a coal mine at the age of 10, was secretary of a United Mine Workers' local, and had been blacklisted after the 1900 strike.

Clean Government Issue, Says McArdle

Clean government is the issue before the people, P. J. McArdle, Independent Republican candidate for Mayor, said in an address at Weber's Hall, Sarah street, last night.

Asserting "flowery promises" of ward chairmen were not kept, McArdle pointed to the need of street repair work and drainage in the Sixteenth Ward. He pleaded for the suppression of the "curse" of rackets, and for tax reduction.

Alexander P. Lindsay, candidate for Common Pleas Court, and Councilmanic Candidates Edward O. Tabor, Charles Wolff, Howard B. McNutt and Robert Waddell, also spoke.

J. Garfield Houston, campaign manager for McArdle, "compared" the three Republican candidates in an address last night.

He asserted Mayor John S. Herron has, by his record in the last four years, forfeited all claim to confidence by militantly supporting policies of the Kline administration, by balking at investigations, and by allowing irregular handling of city finances.

Joseph N. Mackrell cannot be clear of suspicion until he explains "relations" with Joe Engelsberg, Houston said. Mackrell has done nothing about inaugurating his proposed program of economy in his Register of Wills office, Houston suggested.

McArdle is the best qualified of the three candidates, Houston stated. A thoughtful student of government, his record proves his sincerity of purpose, Houston said. He said McArdle's platform of a comprehensive city audit offered the only solution to putting the administration on an efficient basis.

Little Charges Selfish Aims to Herron's Foes

Mayor John S. Herron's two opponents for Republican mayoralty nomination are in the race to satisfy personal, selfish ambitions, Councilman Harry A. Little, candidate for Council, charged in a speech at the Hotel Henry yesterday. He said:

"P. J. McArdle and Joseph N. Mackrell are both old-time politicians. Sometimes they have had the support of one faction, sometimes of another. Both would give almost anything today to get the support of the Regular Republican organization. Since they can't, they call anyone connected with it an election thief."

Mackrell Denounces Mayoralty 'Raffle'

Every citizen should be shocked by the way the city administration is continuing to raffle off the mayoralty, Joseph N. Mackrell, Progressive Republican candidate for Mayor, declared last night.

Speaking in Hays School, Roosevelt School and Gladstone Junior High School, Mackrell said:

"City employes are selling the raffle tickets. One prize is a $10 bill, another a brightly-painted kiddie car. Proceeds are used as a campaign fund to keep the Coyne machine in power. So the same old gang makes a mockery of the highest office within the gift of the people of Pittsburgh."

Praising the work of City Controller James P. Kerr, Mackrell said the Controller's office should be made independent of the administration.

Candidate Scores Poor Board's Record

To return Mrs. W. L. Henderson to the Poor Board means indorsement of a "shocking record of failure," William S. Cooper, Jr., Democratic candidate for poor director, said at Neville Township School last night.

Cooper charged the board's policy was to spend $10 of public funds for $1 of accomplishment.

NAVY NARRATIVES

By LIEUT. JIM HAYS

PART 2.

The Cyclops' lines had been singled up. Only two hawsers remained fast to the dock, one bow and one stern line. The captain called from the bridge through a megaphone to ask me to stand by to let go the last two lines. At a signal I lifted the bow line off its cleat on the dock and let it splash into the river, and watched it hauled up on the Cyclops' fo'castle, dripping wet.

A biting winter wind blowing across the Navy Yard carried the Cyclops' bow away from the dock. Her stern line was slacked off, and I let it go. The Cyclops was off for the tropics, leaving me marooned on a wintry waterfront.

I sat down on my trunk on the dock, a forlorn and solitary figure, wistfully watching my old ship and my shipmates go downstream through the ice cakes, bound for South America.

When she rounded a bend in the river and only her two tall masts and smoke from her strange twin funnels showed above the winter horizon, a lump swelled in my throat, and I turned away, to saunter up into the yard and post the boys' letters home, and to inquire at the commandant's office:

"Will you find out where the Orion is for me?"

The Orion was in New York, taking the place of the Cyclops on the weekly run from Norfolk, with coal. A few days later her motorboat picked me up at the Battery landing and took me aboard, to report to my new captain.

For three more monotonous months I navigated coal cargoes from Norfolk to New York . . . from the same pier at Hampton Roads to the same anchorage between Bedloes and Governors Islands.

DUTIES CITED BY MUSMANNO

Asserting men with well-rounded business experience were needed in the city government, Representative Hugh F. McKnight, Progressive Republican candidate for Council, attacked policies of the present body before a meeting in Roosevelt School, Greenfield avenue, last night.

McKnight detailed a varied business career in support of his candidacy.

Reported Ready to Wed Lady Ashley as Soon as Wife Gets Decree
PARIS, Aug. 28.—Douglas Fairbanks plans to marry Lady Ashley, former London actress, as soon as Mary Pickford's divorce suit is heard, it was reported in Paris today.
Fairbanks, who has been in Paris for several days after a trip to London, where he and his son plan to make films, checked out of the Hotel Crillon two days ago and his present whereabouts were not learned.
Lady Ashley is the former Sylvia Hawkes, wife of the son of the Earl of Shaftesbury, from whom she was separated.

"America's Sweetheart" and Douglas Fairbanks, filmland's most famous couple, have parted. "Pickfair," their palatial Hollywood estate, built by love, is to be sold—and the heart of the adorable Mary, who has delighted millions on the screen throughout the world, is sad.

Just as in her own portrayals upon the screen, Mary Pickford's life has touched joy and sorrow. She has known the pangs of want in a humble cottage; she has experienced the regal splendor of living in a palace. She knows what it is to tramp the streets for a job. And she knows what it is to hear the plaudits of rich and poor alike . . . royalty and peasantry.

Hers has been a life of action . . . colorful . . . dramatic . . . intense. And now her story is to be told . . . a new and revealing story, giving a vivid account of that part of her life heretofore unknown, a story devoid of press agent heraldry, a story that will enthrall you with its sweep.

Mary Pickford's life story, beginning in the Sunday Sun-Telegraph tomorrow, will tell of her rise from a poor girl in Toronto to fame and riches . . . her romance and marriage to Douglas Fairbanks. It will reveal how she helped carry him to the higher steps of stardom only to see him prefer foreign lands and foreign friends while she sought home and happiness in America. All will be recounted in this fascinating and amazing true life story.

Gossipy Chat With Nancy Jane

Jimmie Chapin engaging young son of the Newton Chapins, has a word for it—he was at Franklin Farms, the Sewickley Heights estate of the W. C. Robinsons, recently with some of his playmates, and had been having a grand time eating strawberries. When, telling his mother all about it later with great gusto, she asked him why he didn't bring her some. * * *

Marguerite McCahill, one of the twin daughters of the David I. McCahills, is famous among her friends for her wisecracks. They say the only difference between her and Gracie Allen, of the radio, is that Marguerite doesn't get paid for her remarks. Entering Schenectady, N. Y., with her family on their recent motor trip, Marguerite noticed a huge sign advertising insulators. "Oh, I know what insulators are, they're the things you burn rubbish in," she said, and the family are still chuckling.

GOLF CLOTHES BEAUTIFUL AS WELL AS PRACTICAL

THIS STORY is dedicated to the great strides made towards the art of originality in knitted clothes. A girl can keep her individuality even on the golf links while she's learning to peel a score of 105 down to a slick 80. She does this in knitted clothes that are devoted to the ideals of good lines, classic simplicity, fine tailoring and efficiency. Such things as "tricks" are out. Today's knitted things boast of new yarns, interesting stitches and magnificent new color combinations. It's a gratifying development.

* * *

FURTHERMORE, THIS fall's crop of knit looks like the work of artists who paint their pictures in yarn instead of in pigment. Charming color combinations not usually associated with knitted things have been borrowed by clever designers from the artist's pallettes. We wish we could show you the accompanying sketch in color to give you some idea of their beauty.

* * *

SUCH MIXTURES as tropic green with mustard and rio brown, rust with yellow and brown, oxford gray with green and purple, red brown with tomato red, make you thrill. Gray trimmed with equal portions of yellow and orange are daring too. For conservatives, combinations of two shades of one color are effective in yarns.

* * *

FROM A more practical viewpoint, there is much in favor of knitted clothes. On the golf links they're perfect. For a player who takes her game seriously, the elasticity of the yarn gives the wanted freedom vital to playing well. In the mountains, where good golfers are already sojourning, knitted outfits are sensible. Their warmth is important. As the afternoon grows chilly, the chic thing to do is to throw a knitted coat about the shoulders while walking around the course. Usually this is three-quarters in length, quite full and very smart. We prove it by the accompanying sketch. The knit is a camel hair tweed effect, with a chevron design. Very sporty. The one-piece dress worn by the other player is cleverly woven to simulate a two-piece tunic dress. It is an ingenious way of eliminating the unpleasant bulk that two thicknesses of knit would make about the hips.

* * *

IT WOULD be a bit like trying to tell you in detail just what colors are in a painting to explain every single color used in these costumes. Suffice to say that one should really see them to appreciate how the artist-designer juggled colors around. How a drop of one color was mixed with one shade or added to another.

* * *

ONE WOULD also need to be a magician to tell at first glance whether or not these costumes are hand-knit. They're made on hand machines that turn out life-like duplicates of precious hand-work. Just another evidence of the remarkable machine age we live in!

Music Committee Made Into Department by Outlook Alliance

By MRS. CHARLES M. BREGG

Careful readers of the Outlook Alliance's new year books will find one decided change recorded therein. Out of the 24 committees with which the club functions, one—the music committee—has been taken and made into a department, which may be interpreted as the alliance's first step towards becoming a departmental organization.

Under the direction of Mrs. G. W. Grier, the new department is making extensive plans which will include continuance of the choral group of 12 voices, several benefits for the club and probably a costume event. The department also will co-operate with committees in furnishing several of the programs during the season.

Mrs. H. D. Stark is advisor, Mrs. Martin Leiseder, accompanist and librarian, and also in the department's personnel are Mrs. Hollis Archer, Mrs. George Blume, Mrs. William Wilson Coledge, Mrs. Herbert Lytle, Mrs. Mary Rhodes McBride, Mrs. Raymond Metzger, Mrs. Homer Phillips, Mrs. Louis Staub and Mrs. E. J. Vetter. Mrs. R. G. Dorrance, Mrs. W. A. Thompson and Mrs. George Jones are in charge of department activities.

Miss Lichtenfels Becomes Bride Of Dr. Fair

Mr. and Mrs. Percy V. Lichtenfels, of Pitcairn, announce the marriage of their daughter, Miss Elizabeth May Lichtenfels, to Dr. Jacob Clifford Fair, which took place Saturday, August 19.

Included in the attractions will be the only frog-legged boy in existence, a bearded lady, America's only Siamese twins, the oldest dwarfs, the tallest lady in the world, and a human skeleton.

Mrs. O. T. Bielau, chairman of the dramatic committee, is in charge and is assisted by Mrs. Margaret Sanders, Mrs. Robert R. Allen, Mrs. Kenneth Geary, Mrs. C. George Reinheimer, Mrs. A. Alfred Salzmann, Mrs. James A. Smith and Mrs. William Thomson.

Robert Owrey to Sing At Congress Reception

Robert Owrey, baritone, will sing a group of German lieder and one of modern English songs at the president's reception at the Congress of Clubs, September 12. Mrs. David Alter, of Bennington avenue, has just been made a member of the board of directors of the Congress.

Dr. and Mrs. J. C. Mason Sojourning at Seashore

Dr. and Mrs. James G. Mason are in Atlantic City, N. J., at Haddon Hall. They will return about September 15 to be at home in Lincoln avenue, Bellevue. Before her marriage on July 25, Mrs. Mason was Miss Nellie Virginia Barr, daughter of Mr. and Mrs. John D. Barr, of Antrim street, Dr. Mason is the son of Mrs. Lillian Mason and the late Earl Mason, of Lincoln avenue, Bellevue.

New Kensington Club to Mark Anniversary

An unusual cover of shining silver paper binds the new year book of the New Kensington Woman's Club and announces to the reader that the club will celebrate its silver anniversary this season.

Opening with president's day on September 14, honoring Mrs. Roland M. Swank, the club will proceed with its monthly meetings, hearing Attorney Edward O. Tabor on "The New Order"; Rabbi Benedict Glazer, on "Some Vital Possessions of a Happy Woman" and a program by the dramatic committee.

In the new year will come a talk by Miss Elizabeth M. Lee on "Far Away Neighbors in South America," an address by Dr. William H. Guy, of Falk Clinic; a discussion of antiques by Lily Bell Deatrick, of the University of West Virginia, a talk on "Aluminum," by Dr. P. V. Faragher, the annual meeting in May and the silver anniversary, which will be the season's concluding event on June 14.

Wilkinsburg B.P.W. To Give Dinner, Pal Party

A dinner meeting and a pal party have been arranged for this month by the Wilkinsburg Business and Professional Women's Club, the former on Tuesday, the twelfth, and the latter on the twenty-sixth.

A paid-up dues party on September 12 is the opening affair of the year. It, like the other regular meetings, will be held in the Duquesne Carnegie Library.

Judge Benjamin Lencher is to speak before the club in October and there's also a Halloween box social scheduled. A scouting program, a dance, a program by children, a talk on antiques by Sarah Fulton Knowles, a charity benefit, a reciprocity day, a style show, a mother and daughter banquet, a picnic and a music night are other good things listed for the season.

Wildwood Country Club Plans Special Features

The Wildwood Country Club members will have an 18 holes medal play on Monday at a special Labor Day attraction, and in the afternoon there will be a best ball twosome and match play versus par, for the club's golfers.

There will be a dinner dance in the evening with dancing from 9 until 1 o'clock.

Should Woman Quit Her Job To Follow Husband?

When jobs clash, who should do the giving up—Darby, or Joan?

That is a question which is starting a riot in Sophie's home.

Before Sophie and Bud were married, she had a job. She still has it, and it has grown to be quite a job, and promises to grow even bigger. Bud himself hasn't forged ahead quite so fast. But now he is offered a chance that will put him on top of the heap.

If he accepts, however—and Sophie doesn't quit hers—they'll have to live in different cities, miles apart.

And that's where the rub comes in.

Nor is it a rub that is unusual in these topsy-turvy days. In fact it has caused plenty of argument, in plenty of families, since the Good Old Days, when Woman's Place Was in the Home. And it will probably cause plenty more, before men and women and business get through—or get together.

Sophie has worked hard. She is proud of her job, and her success in it. She is eager to climb higher. And she thinks that Bud should stay on the job he has.

"I know that if he just sticks here," she argues, "something will come up. He'll be able to get ahead here, without my having to sacrifice all I have striven for, and all I can do if I keep my place in the firm I'm with."

DISAGREES WITH HUBBY

But Bud doesn't agree.

"This is my big chance!" he insists, "and if you were any kind of a wife, you'd see it. It's the kind of work I've always wanted to get into. The kind I like, and have a talent for. It is up to you to stand by me, and help me to go ahead. My mother wouldn't have hesitated an instant. Where my dad's best interests were, she went. She wanted him to get ahead."

To which Sophie retorts, "Well, your mother was different. She was content to make your father her complete interest . . . to 'see her success in seeing him successful.' And as a matter of fact, she couldn't do anything else. Women didn't have jobs then. Women are different now. They have rights, as well as men. So—how about my right to make something of my life?"

Which argument, she thinks, should be unanswerable. But Bud has an answer—and Sophie doesn't like it any better than she likes the idea of quitting and following him to new pastures.

WHICH IS BEST?

For—"Very well, if you won't go with me, I'll go alone," he says, his face beginning to blank with obstinate purpose.

But still she hasn't given in. She is still insisting that she has just as much right as he has to say whether they'll stay where they are or not. In fact, since she has gotten farther ahead than he, she has a notion that she has more right.

What's your slant on their problem?

When "rights" clash who shall step down and follow?

Should Bud consider her future, and take a chance on passing up the opening he sees for his own? Or is it up to her to think of him first, and go with him where he wants to go, even if it costs her plenty?

And what'll happen to their marriage if she doesn't—if he doesn't?

Maybe you have lived such a story—or seen one lived.

If you have, tell us about it.

THE LAST DAY

Drawn by Nell Brinkley

A silvery canoe rides the high bosom of a mountain lake—oh, pretty shell of romance that carried Indian lovers, too, when this continent was an echoing wilderness world. To be truly a lover's canoe it must be birch-bark—light as a leaf on the water. It carries on the silver surface a man and a girl—and love. They are saying "adieu"—really "goodby—not "so-long" or "au revoir," to the priceless, precious, rare vacation days—so short—such a little time to dream and play, out of so long to dig and delve. Why!—added together—the two short weeks out of each city-bound year that they may visit their Mother Earth and lay their face to her mysterious breast, added together for a life time they may come to only a year or two. Only a year or two to ride the waters, listen to the voices of hill and sea, stream and forest and field, feel green grass, study the faces of the flowers, lay a hand on the living bark of a tree. No wonder they are precious—these vacation days—and that lovers, and friends, parents and children, make a rite of the Last Day, and wonder "will I ever come again this way?"

The longer I live, the more beautiful the aspect of the world, cold and gray, or warm and golden, grows. I think if it keeps growing more beautiful in that fashion to us, our days may be shortened for lack of being able to stand more glory! Maybe that's why that, yearly we have to leave the rural and wild world, and go back to the tame and metropolitan. We might either grow into clods with no eyes to see, or slightly mad poets, according to our nature, if we had our fill of Mother Nature.

There is always a goodby hovering like a shy but persistent nymph, in the landscape of every perfect interlude. The happy honeymoon must wane and the mated come home again, every day the mother says farewell to her child—the next day THAT little boy is no more—every day is the last day for some lovely experience.

It is because we are never still—we journey along.

The thing is, to see and feel with all our might—and store away the sweetness and the joy like a perfume and a bar of music that can be breathed in again and awakened when we will! NELL BRINKLEY.

Correct Manners

By Mrs. Cornelius Beeckman

Invitation

Dear Mrs. Beeckman:

I have been invited out to a camp for a week-end. The people who invited me have asked me to bring a friend with me. Would it be perfectly all right for me to ask a young man to go with me, if it is convenient for the owners of the camp?

I am not engaged to this boy, but we are very good friends. The owners of the camp have told me that it would be convenient for them, but I want to know if it would be in keeping with correct manners?

The owners of the camp are an elderly couple.. M.

You must find out first from these kind people if it would be convenient for them if you invited a young man to come with you. Their household arrangements might not be convenient for this. Thank them for their gracious and generous invitation, say that you would be delighted to invite a friend to come with you as they suggest, and then ask them if you should invite a girl or a boy, and which would be convenient for them. Then you will be guided by their answer.

If this is the first time that you have visited them, I suggest that you invite a girl to go with you; just take it for granted that this would be more convenient.

Birth Announcement

Dear Mrs. Beeckman:

1—Will you please advise me if it is correct to send out announcements when a new baby arrives or announce it in the papers?

2—When introducing your husband do you say, "Mrs. Brown, this is my husband" or do you say, "Allow me to present my husband, Mr. Black"? A.

1—We may, with correctness, do anything we wish about making this announcement. We may make no formal announcement . . . just informing our relatives and close friends, by telegram or telephone or note. Or we may send formal announcements, the Mr. and Mrs. engraved card, with the tiny baby-card attached with the narrow white ribbon. Or we may send the informal, filled-out cards that may be bought at the stationer's. Or we may send out either kind of card and also make an announcement in the newspapers. Or we may just make the announcement in the newspapers. Any of these is correct.

2—The first form . . . "Mrs. Brown, this is my husband" is the usual one. The other form you mention is a bit stiff and over-formal.

Correct Salutation

Dear Mrs. Beeckman:

When a girl of fifteen wishes to write to a boy of the same age, how should the salutation of the letter read? G

"Dear Tommy" or whatever his name is would probably be the form that she would naturally use.

Contract Bridge

HOW TO PLAY and HOW TO WIN

By JOSEPHINE CULBERTSON

The Remarkable Result

Mr. Walter Malowan, the foreign editor of The Bridge World, who has played Bridge not only in America but in the capitals of most European countries, declares that the hand below is one of the most unusual he has ever encountered. He sat in the South position. The bidding was:

West	North	East	South
2♡	2♠	3♢	Pass
3♡	3♠	4♡	Pass
Pass	4♠	Pass	Pass
5♡	5♠	Pass	Pass
6♡	Double	Pass	Pass
Pass

It will be noticed that never once did Mr. Malowan participate in the auction, and that it was his partner who doubled the six heart contract, which was set four tricks in spite of the Opening bid of two in a suit. The most surprising thing about the hand is that all five tricks taken by the defending players were won by Mr. Malowan, his partner the doubler, failing to take a single trick. The complete hands were:

West, Dealer.

Both sides vulnerable.

The bidding, as given above, discloses that the hand was not played by the type of experts who gather in clubs in New York. North's Double of six hearts was, of course, atrocious.

North opened the spade King, which was ruffed by the Declarer. The latter now drew two rounds of trumps, played the King and a small diamond, and finessed the Knave in Dummy. South's Queen won, and South finally took three club tricks in addition to the Queen of diamonds.

It might be noted that a further remarkable feature of the hand is that if the Declarer had guessed the diamonds correctly, he would have made his contract. The unfortunate finesses cost him five tricks.

TODAY'S QUESTION

Will you comment on the following bidding and tell what South's next bid should be? South holds:

♠AK7 ♡AJ109 ♢Q76 ♣J84

North is dealer, and the bidding proceeds as follows:

North	East	South	West
1♢	1♠	2♠	Pass
3♢	3♡	Double	Pass
4♢	Pass	4NT	Pass
5♢	Pass

Answer—South should pass at this point, in view of North's minimum responses after the Takeout of the Double of three hearts. North probably holds a long diamond suit, headed by the Ace-King and the club King, and there probably are one or two clubs and a heart loser. Incidentally, South should not have bid two spades on the first round, because of the balanced distribution of the holding, and, therefore, lack of ruffing possibilities; he should have bid three notrumps.

Given in Marriage

A Sequel to Heart Of a Wife

By ADELE GARRISON

Hugh Grantland Unable to Hide Jealousy

For a panic-stricken second that seemed an hour, I mulled over the venomous look of jealousy I had seen in Hugh Grantland's eyes when he asked me if I were responsible for Philip Veritzen giving his consent to the marriage of Mary and Noel. Then, looking him steadily in the eyes, I answered his strictures.

"On the contrary," I said, "I had nothing to do with it. Mrs. Underwood was the one who brought him to his senses. She has known him for years, you know, and her affection for him was greatly strengthened by his offer of any amount to save Marion."

"Yes, that was a magnificent gesture," Hugh said. But the tone behind the words betrayed clearly his belief that Mr. Veritzen's action was but a gesture, nothing more.

"I cannot say as to that," I said noncommittally, "but Lillian believed it to be sincere. And her belief so tinged her appeal to him not to be a 'welcher' that in sheer decency he could do nothing else save accede to her demand that he keep the promise he had made to me—that I was to be the sole arbiter of the time of their marriage."

I could have bitten my tongue through at the slip I had made, in saying "the promise he had made to me." Why could I not have said "to them" instead? Too late, now, however, for anything save vain regret. The look which flashed into Hugh's eyes was not as ugly as the one which I had seen in them before, but there was still venom enough in it to give me distinct cause for concern.

FEARS LOOPHOLE

"He promised you this," he said, accenting the pronoun.

"I really should say he promised it to all four of us," I hedged; "to Noel, Mary, Mrs. Underwood and myself. It was at Christmas time and I fancy his heart was softened toward his son by the season."

Hugh gave a little grunt, palpably of disbelief, and I hurried on.

"He made three promises at that time," I said. "One was to turn over to Noel his mother's money, which he had been keeping from the boy for years. He made this legal, so that Noel has that secure. His second promise was to keep Mary on as a potential Veritzen star. So far he has kept that promise, but I fear that he may find some loophole for escape after their marriage."

"I have no doubt of that," Hugh said, snipping off his words as if he were clipping thread, and I reflected that Hugh Grantland was one of the men who might be described as a "hearty hater."

"I know," I said despondently. "I am afraid of that, too, but there is nothing we can do about it now. If he turns difficult after their marriage, I imagine Mrs. Underwood may be able to make him see how heinous his conduct is. She appears to have more interest for him than has anyone else."

"Do you expect me to believe that?" Hugh asked quietly.

I looked at him steadily.

"Yes, I do," I said. "I will be frank enough to tell you that there may have been a time that was not true; when—I think I may say it without vanity—Philip Veritzen would have listened to me before almost anyone else.

"I knew that," Hugh said hoarsely, "and are you deluding yourself into the belief that that attitude no longer exists?"

SHOWS JEALOUSY

His face was dark with suspicious anger, his eyebrows narrowed into a heavy frown.

"There is no delusion about it," I said stiffly, "and I ask you to believe that I know what I am talking about. Philip Veritzen's feeling for me is no longer anything warmer than that of professional comradeship. Lillian has far more influence with him that I have.

"But all this is beside the mark," I hurried on, for I wished to give him no chance for further discussion of Philip Veritzen's feeling toward me. "What I have to consider now is the fact that, although he did give up his project of sending Mary to France, consented to their marriage and promised to come to the wedding, he has not yet replied to the invitation we sent him. I must find out what is the reason for his silence."

"Why does it matter whether he comes or not?" Hugh demanded, "Surely Mary and Noel do not need him, after his scurvy treatment of them."

"As far as Noel and Mary are concerned, I do not think they will be able to identify anyone at their wedding except the minister."

"Then who does want him?" Hugh demanded.

Fashion Flashes

By ALICE ALDEN

The quill points the way to millinery success. One of the most delightful of the early autumn hats is a toque made entirely of turquoise blue lacquered quills. It is covered with a horsehair veil.

More moire seems to be the feeling for Autumn clothes. New and charming is a simple little suit in black moire with a waist-coat of heavy white ottoman silk and a simple blouse of palest flesh lace.

All in the family is the ensemble with two shades of the same color. A new ensemble has a dress of pale gray satin and a coat of eel gray woolen. The dress has bias fagotting for trimming, so has the coat.

Back again for autumn is the woolen suit, for town wear. A grand utility model is brown homespun, the coat lined with thin beige woolen, the same fabric making the blouse, the three-quarter coat has tuxedo revers of Russian bear.

Your duty to your wardrobe means that you must own at least one good utility or travel coat. A new model, done in red-brown homespun with a hairy surface, has a notched collar, full tuxedo revers and deep cuffs, all of mink gills.

Be in the picture, wear a coat frock this autumn. They are ever so smart. A lovely model is in heavy gray corded silk with a narrow rib. It closes at the side with novelty silver ornaments and has a separate collarette of matching gray fox.

How to Keep Well

By DR. ROYAL S. COPELAND

The Foot and Mouth Disease

"Foot and mouth disease" is a rare affliction in the human family. It is seldom that inquiries are made regarding this peculiar ailment. But in a recent mail I received two letters asking for information about it.

Dr. Copeland

To answer these letters it is necessary to go somewhat into detail. Foot and mouth disease is primarily a disease of the lower animals. It is an acute and highly contagious disease, usually confined to cloven-footed beasts.. It is transmitted to men who handle such animals.

Fortunately, it is a disease rarely encountered now among the live stock of this country. Only a few outbreaks have been reported in recent years.

This decrease can be traced to the energetic measures taken by the Department of Agriculture.

The animal suffering from foot and mouth disease appears ill. It has many sores and blisters. These are found on the lining of the mouth and on the skin above the hoofs. Occasionally the rash is seen on the udder of cows, as well as other parts of the animal.

Fortunately, as a disease of the human family it is exceedingly mild The chief danger of the disease in man is that he may unsuspectingly transmit it to his animals.

The ailment can be transmitted to man by the drinking of raw milk or buttermilk, or the eating of butter and cheese made from milk obtained from diseased animals. At one time the disease was quite prevalent in children who were fed such milk. Unless it is pasteurized, it is best to boil milk when any doubt exists as to the health of the cows.

Most of the cases reported in men have been traced to the careless handling of infected animals. Every precaution should be taken against such infection. Whenever the disease is discovered the suspected cattle should be isolated, quarantined and kept under rigid supervision.

If foot and mouth disease is found among the animals, it is best that they be slaughtered, and the carcasses completely destroyed by fire, or by deep burial. Though this is an expensive and arduous procedure, it is the only sure means of complete eradication of the disease.

Answers to Health Queries

B. G. P. Q.—Would it be advisable for a woman who has been cured of tuberculosis to marry and have children? What precautions should be taken when one is constantly around a tubercular patient? Is the trouble easily contracted?

A.—If the disease has been definitely cleared up there would seem to be no reason why the patient should not marry. One should avoid coming in contact with the patient's mouth in any way—dishes, etc., should be kept separate and the rooms constantly aired and sunned. This depends upon the general health and resistance.

N. R. Q.—What would you advise for acne? I am a boy of 19. 2—The glands in my neck are sometimes swollen and my knees make a cracking sound when I stoop. Could these conditions be due to an underlying infection?

A.—For full particulars send a self-addressed stamped envelope and repeat your question Careful examination should help to fix the cause and this in turn will determine the necessary treatment. 2—For further particulars send a self-addressed, stamped envelope and repeat your question.

Warning Child of Dangers

By CONSTANCE CAMERON

The child under 3 or 4 years of age is afraid of very few things, unless, of course, he has been taught by example or deliberate suggestion to be afraid of them.

Psychologists tell us that a baby has only two fears, one being of a loud noise, the other of falling.

That is quite conceivable, for his perceptions have only developed to the place where he realizes that a sudden shout is different than the usual quiet of his nursery, or if, in picking him up, Daddy's arm slips and the baby feels nothing under him he knows that that, too, is something out of the ordinary and he is afraid.

As his experiences take in a bigger circle and his perceptions grow keener so that he instantly recognizes when things are different than usual, the suggestion of a potential danger will creep into his mind.

It is hard for the mother of the 3 to 4-year-old child to instill caution into him without creating too great a fear of everything that is new or extraordinary.

But it can be done. First of all, from the real dangers such as exposure to places harboring articles on which the child may be cut, burned, or where he may get a nasty tumble, he must be kept away. He must be unequivocally kept from dangers of traffic, learning slowly and by repeated trips with mother, to cross a street in safety, how to wait for the proper light. He must be taught caution slowly and patiently, but, if you want a self-reliant child he must not be rudely frightened in your attempt to teach him of certain dangers from which he must keep away.

We've considered several times, the fearful mistake of using fear as mother's weapon to gain obedience. But this sudden change from babyhood to the toddler stage which is always accompanied by growing fear of things, is an angle which was suggested to me by a mother who claimed that her child who had heretofore been so unafraid, was rapidly turning into a coward. I think, if we understand that the child begins to fear because he begins to recognize the difference between everyday happenings and unusual situations, we shall be better able to assuage his fear and turn the natural stimulus which says to him: "Be careful—it will hurt you" into a reaction of, "It won't hurt me if I take proper care what I do or when I do it."

Household Hints

Cut a piece of material from the tail of a worn shirt, dip in starch and place on the worn part of the shirt, then sew together.

Hold a coarse darning needle between the thumb and forefinger. Take your dull scissors and cut quickly from hand to point of needle.

When sewing on buttons use dental floss. The buttons will stay on as long as the garment lasts.

It is difficult to sew buttons on a baby's sweater. White shoe strings strung through the loops and laced are much better.

If one of the older card tables has gotten wobbly and is annoying, when you must use it, wrap an invisible hairpin tightly around the section where the braces meet. It will hold for the evening's pleasure.

The Beauty Box

By HELEN FOLLETT

Women who are given over to the hair dyeing habit must remember that it is not safe to change dyes, unless tresslocks are properly conditioned. Hair dyes are composed of chemicals and chemicals fight. It is impossible for the novice to know what the result will be when she switches from one coloring agent to another. Professional dyers have made a study of this subject so, if considering a change, seek the advice of one who knows the beauty ropes. Never use peroxide on hair that has been hennaed. This combination produces a pinkish orange that breaks the heart of the most courageous beauty quester.

When acne is present, giving a speckled trout appearance to the alabaster complexion, there is a nervous impulse to pass the fingers over pustules. Mustn't do. Finger tips are not sterile; they pick up germs from door knobs, furniture, all dusty articles. The infection is spread, conditions made worse. Use soap and water freely twice a day, rinsing with warm water, placing over the face a cloth that has been dipped in hot water, following along with a cold rinsing. Dry gently, apply ointment of zinc oxide and go to bed. In the morning use cold water again.

For the sake of the preservation of her youthful looks, for the sake of her self-respect, her digestion and her nervous system, a woman should keep good natured and be amiable. Affability is a quality of beauty that counts for more than the sassy coiffure and the ice cream-and-roses complexion. A fair weather disposition makes for a fair face, the surly nature makes for a sour one. A pleasant expression is not only a balm to the eye, but it wards off wrinkles and side-tracks tissue sags. Discontent, jealousy, envy, petulance are beauty's arch enemies. What they can do to the prettiest face is more than plenty.

The heavyweight makes a grave mistake when she puts her feet into high-heeled shoes. Her little dogs carry a heavy load, should be entitled to a substantial foothold. Spiked heels throw the body out of alignment, cause the abdominal muscles to relax and sag. And they are a strain on the nervous system.

A slow recurrent waking in the dawn,
A bit to eat—the dull routine of toil,
Comprise my time—yet one must carry on
And use a mask of laughter for a foil.
The world shies clear of those who bear their cross
Too openly—and so I go my way
With jaunty tread, and strive to ease my loss
In fevered lures and gay and senseless play.

But all my nights are burdened with your ghost,
And you are part of all my waking lulls;
And I, the lad who made the foolish boast
That glamour dies and romance rots and dulls

Feel blinding tears on any night that I
See Summer moons go riding down the sky.

Willard Keefe reports that a ballplayer named Sumner of the White Sox never got out of the bull-pen save when a game appeared to be irretrievably lost. One Sunday when his team was playing a doubleheader with the Yanks, Sumner labored in the pen, and when he decided he wouldn't be called on, he ordered a sandwich. He had just ouried his teeth in it when the Yanks fell on the Sox hurler, who was sent to the bench. Sumner was called in to take the rest of the punishment.

The rookie laid down his sandwich, and said to the warm-up catcher:

"Who's up next?"

"Ruth, Gehrig and Chapman."

Sumner shoved his sandwich back into the shade.

"Don't let anybody touch that," he said, "I'll be right back."

Bargain

Irving Brecher dedicates this one to the comedians now cluttering up the airwaves. It concerns a temperamental clown, who demanded $1,500 a week and after his audition his sponsors told him they'd pay $750 and not a penny more.

"Okay," was the retort, "but remember—I won't be funny!"

Form of Criticism

And P. K. Thomajan is of the opinion that some New York politicians soon won't have a yegg to stand on.

Portrait

The other midnight a group of us were unhappy about the dullness in the Broadway sector. All of us agreed that being elsewhere certainly would be more exciting or something. We confessed we were sorry we left Hollywood and wished we were there again.

And then the long distance phone rang.

"Hullo, Walter?" cried a pal in Hollywood, "talk to me, this is Mack."

"Whaddaya want?" we queried.

"I just wanna talk," he almost wept, "it's so dull here."

Of All Things

Pierre de Rohan says he saw it on a local headstone:

"Here lies Bessie Cass, aged 71. She was a faithful wife for 50 years, and died in the confident hope of a better life hereafter."

Always In Character

Mike Romanoff, the affable impostor, who still calls himself "Prince" Romanoff, last of the Czar's kin, is in our feverish midst again. What you like best about the "Prince" is his amazing indifference to criticism.

Alva Johnston reveals Mike was the guest of a friend at the exclusive Atlantic Beach Club—so exclusive even Romanoff can crash it. But another Russian, down for the same week-end, complained bitterly to the management of Romanoff's presence.

"It is obnoxious to me," said the other phony.

"What pains me," declared Romanoff sadly when he was informed of the complaint, "is that it came from one of my subjects."

David Murrayisms

The average old maid wouldn't have such a well-filled hope chest if she had a pair of well-filled stockings . . . The only guy I know who lives on love is the florist . . . Add similes: Automatic as a gold-digger's wink.

There, Now

Jane Manners is that pretty person whose face reminds you of a magazine cover. At a party the other midnight a reporter remarked that a girl that pretty had to be careful of her rep.

"There isn't a thing," was her indifferent reply, "that anybody can say about me—that hasn't been thought."

Have Some Mizner

Mickey Neilan, another of the late Bill Mizner's pals, recalls the time an old friend, who was a good stick-up merchant in his prime, 'phoned Mizner for a touch.

"Bill," said the ex-con, "how about a loan of $500?"

"The connection is bad," stalled Mizner, "wha'ja say?"

"I say," was the next crack, "how about letting me have $1,000?"

"What'samatter?" hinted Bill, "don't it get dark, anymore?"

Snub

At a Hollywood party the other night, according to Neilan, two well known femme movie stars went too gay, after an all-night drinking bout with one of your favorite male actors. The following morning the actor's girl ankled into the place. Behind a divan, prone on the floor was one of the guests and the other was unconscious behind the piano.

"Get that drunken bum outta here!" commanded his gal.

"Darling," hiccuped the one behind the divan, "I've been slighted."

Merciless Truth

Then there's the honest-to-goodness incident that happened on a New York paper, not a tabloid, s'helpus! The radio critic was pecking at his machine-gun, designing a roast for an air entertainer. The critic wanted to say of him:

"He is a pennant of illiteracy!"

After he started the line, he paused and yelled across the editorial room:

"Hey! How do you guys spell illiteracy?"

Best Picture Of Months In Penn

By GEORGE SEIBEL

It is not often that everything about a picture can be praised, but "Broadway to Hollywood" at the Penn Theater is that picture. To begin with, there are a pair of actors from the legitimate stage who are as good as the legitimate stage can boast, Alice Brady and Frank Morgan are just as good on the screen as they were in "Mademoiselle" and "Topaze," two fine plays that Pittsburgh never saw.

Mr. Seibel

They are a pair of vaudeville troupers, the "Two Hacketts," and with their bickerings and temperaments, their professional pride and their downward progress, they give as appealing and human and true-to-life a piece of teamwork as the stage or screen has ever seen. It will be hard for the season to furnish anything better than Alice Brady and Frank Morgan in "Broadway to Hollywood."

The picture itself has literary and dramatic qualities far above the average. It has elements in it of "The Royal Family," of "Show Boat" and of "The Good Companions." It is an epic of three generations done in a style that recalls the humanity of Dickens. Beginning on Tony Pastor's stage, going on to Weber and Fields, it winds up in a Hollywood studio amid a blaze of glory.

Fay Templeton is there, our Fay herself glorified once again, and Jimmy Durante is there in a brief flash to show the new dispensations. Jackie Cooper has some fine moments, and May Robson has one very fine scene. Then there is Madge Evans doing a terrific bit of acting, and Eddie Quillan in some pleasant moments.

But for grand acting, acting in the finest tradition, that last two minutes of this picture cannot be beaten. See it for some marvelous photography, but see it for Alice Brady's great dramatics as Frank Morgan dies.

This week the picture is better than "Mickey Mouse," which does not happen often—and "Mickey" is as good as ever.

New Screen Team

Myrna Loy and Warner Baxter are paired effectively in "Penthouse," Arthur Somers Roche's Cosmopolitan magazine story which begins in serial form in the Sun-Telegraph next Thursday. Cosmopolitan Productions has screened "Penthouse" for M.-G.-M.

Stagestruck Girl at the Stanley

By MARGARET RUSSELL

The literature of story, stage and screen that longest survives is that which deals with human fundamentals. There is nothing more human or fundamental than the desire that is born in the heart of nearly every young girl to be another Bernhardt or Ellen Terry. In some the desire is short lived, perhaps a year, a week or an hour. In others it refuses to be stifled by the pressure of almost insurmountable difficulties.

Such a one was Eva Lovelace, portrayed by Katharine Hepburn in "Morning Glory" at the Stanley this week. Eva was almost as naive as her namesake in Uncle Tom's Cabin, when she reached New York. But in her was an unquenchable fire that resisted disillusionment, failure in small parts, cheap vaudeville acts and frequent homeless hunger.

"Morning Glory" gives the deep-voiced sophisticate a new role to interpret, and she does it well. Douglas Fairbanks, Jr., Adolphe Menjou, C. Aubrey Smith and Mary Duncan give her good support.

She'll tug at a chord in your heart, because she's a little bit of every girl from a small town who wants to make good on a big city stage. She'll make you laugh, too, because she's so ridiculously young and eager and believing.

You may not like the picture's ending because it leaves you up in the air a bit, but if you figure it out, you'll agree it is as wise as it is inevitable. Youth never listens to age or reason. And there's always a chance that Eva Lovelace might be able to beat the "Morning Glory" fate that lurks ahead.

The Stanley program includes a travelogue to Samoa, a short musical subject, "The Operator's Opera" and Pathe News pictures.

Film Shows Roosevelt Horse Win

THE GLOBE TROTTER

President Roosevelt apparently gets a great vacation thrill out of seeing his son, John, win the blue ribbon on his mount "New Deal" at the Dutchess County fair at Rhinebeck, N. Y., pictures of which are contained in the current issue of Hearst Metrotone News. John displays fine horsemanship, and "New Deal" is as good as his name Young Roosevelt is also seen riding with his sister, Mrs. Curtis Dahl, in the family saddle horse class, in which they win fourth prize. The President witnesses the proceedings from the side lines, and the Globe Trotter tells all about it.

William Green, president of the American Federation of Labor, in a stirring talk on the NRA declares that labor should back the President to the limit, and assures every working man that this will surely mean less hours and higher wages.

Lott and Stoeffen are seen playing brilliantly in the finals for the National tennis title at Brookline, Mass., to win over Parker and Shields. Helen Jacobs, recent conqueror of Helen Wills Moody, is among the spectators.

The lifting of the embargo on the exportation of gold by President Roosevelt creates great activity in mining circles. In the Far West additional men are put to work in the placer tunnels, while in those regions where the gold is washed by hydraulic pressure, the plants are forging ahead full speed. Thousands of others are making good wages "panning" the gold by hand.

There are thrills galore in the wrestling match at Los Angeles between Jim Browning and Sammy Stein. Stein finally loses by taking a header from the ring and knocking himself out.

Tungary honors its first ruler, St. Stephan, cannonized King and the country's greatest hero, with an impressive procession through the streets of Budapest. The central figure in the pageant is Admiral Horthy, the Regent.

Col. Carlos Mendieta, Cuban revolt leader, is seen returning to his native land after a two-year exile in the United States. He is greeted by a crowd of 50,000 persons, including President de Cespedes, whom the Colonel may succeed at the next election.

In the little town of Macon, France, noted for its wines, the peasants hold a big parade in anticipation of the winning of repeal in the United States.

(Note—Owing to the necessity upon the theater managers to arrange their programs in time schedules, it is possible that some of the subjects in the above issue of Hearst Metrotone News may not be shown in your theater.)

Swanson in Neck Curls

By HARRISON CARROLL

HOLLYWOOD, Sept. 2.—It seems like the old days. Gloria Swanson has introduced a hair-dress that has the whole town talking. Gasps and excited comments followed the glamorous marquise as she entered the forecourt of Grauman's Chinese Theater and later walked down the aisle to take her seat among Hollywood's elite gathered for the premiere of "Dinner at Eight."

The fact that Gloria and the handsome Michael Farmer were accompanied by Carole Lombard and Bill Powell was sensation number one. But the unique and startling hair-dress worn by the star was what set the gossips really buzzing. It was like turning back a page in Hollywood's history to the time when Gloria's coiffures in De Mille pictures used to start thousands of girls into a fully of imitation.

The new Swanson hair-dress—and this is authentic because I called Gloria up and she described it to me—consists of a part down the center to the nape of the neck—four curls on either side of the forehead and a similar number on each side at the back.

You'll be interested in the origin. Gloria explained:

"When I was in Europe, Suzanne Talbot designed a pork-pie hat for me. She urged me to dress my hair something like this. But I really got the idea from a picture of an aunt of mine taken around 1900. She was wearing a mass of curls at the forehead. This wasn't exactly what I wanted. I got a French girl who used to work on my hair in pictures and we devised this coiffure with the four curls on either side."

The result, I'm assuring you, is Hollywood's main topic of conversation today.

* * *

Maybe you haven't heard it. Bernie Bernard's story of the vaudeville actor who stood in such terror of getting the sack that he hated to open his mail. One day, a long envelope arrived for him. Watching furtively, his fellow performers saw him turn pale. With shaking fingers he slit the envelope, took out the sheet of papaper. Came a sigh of relief. He exclaimde:

"My brother is dead."

* * *

With the start of her picture only a week away, Clara Bow and Rex Bell have suddenly packed up and gone to their ranch. They even forgot to notify some invited guests who showed up to go swimming on Sunday and found a deserted house. Fox insists there is no trouble over the picture and close friends of Clara's bear them out. The lowdown, they say, is that the red-head always gets in a terrific state of nerves before the start of a picture. She had been in bed for three days, and the studio naturally was sending people out to talk to her. Clara's solution was a disappearance act. But everyone says she'll be back.

Comedy at Warner

By MARGARET GARRAHAN

Warren Williams, as the reluctant swain, and Joan Blondell, as the girl who tries to save him from his follies, put on a clicky, rib-tickling performance for the comedy-minded in "Goodbye Again," which opened yesterday in the Warner.

Based on the Broadway play of the same name, the picture has as its central character a lecture-touring author whose appearance in Cleveland, besides fluttering the ladies a bit, rekindles the almost forgotten affection of a former college sweetheart.

Despite Mr. William's protests—and the fact that she already has a husband—the sweetheart, being a very persistent sort of person, follows the author hither and yon. And her husband, her sister and a lawyer, knowing the sweetheart, follow, too. Meanwhile Joan, who, incidentally, sports a new bob for this film, does her darndest as William's secretary to keep her boss from getting too involved.

Things are not so easy, though, and William, Joan, the sweetheart, the husband, the sister and the lawyer all wind up in Albany for the "scene grande" with talk of divorce and everything in general in a great muddle. It is Joan's quick thinking that saves the day.

A news reel and two musical shorts, "Hot From Petrograd" and Ethel Waters in "Rufus Jones for President," complete the bill.

WILL ROGERS SAYS

BEVERLY HILLS, Cal., Sept. 2.

To the Editor, Sun-Telegraph:

We got a little shot of inflation coming along now in a few weeks, and a lot of us dumb ones are trying to find out just what it is, just where it attacks you, and how.

All you can learn about it is, "Money will be cheaper." Cheaper than what? If a dollar is worth only 10 cents, how are you going to get your clutches on it any easier than now? Unless they give it away, I can't see where it's going to be any big help to everybody. I am only asking these questions, I don't want 'em answered.

Had chat yesterday with Mr. Raskob, a wealthy man that was a Democrat before it was fashionable. In fact he was ostracised from the other rich for years. He is in favor of inflation (unique for a millionaire). Well, even he had a little trouble explaining what it was, so I certainly don't want to have to listen to any of you amateurs in the money business.

Yours, WILL.

Tragedy in Davis Film

By MILDRED FILLMORE

One of the most delicate questions of all time—"How is a young girl to learn about life?"—is the theme of "What Price Innocence," feature presentation at the Davis and Sheridan Square this week.

A "too nice" mother, a typical young daughter in her 'teens, a father who "never thought of it" and the family doctor are the film's chief characters.

While a bit draggy perhaps, the film is interesting for its unusual tracing of the young girl's everyday life as she vainly tries to query and confide in her mother.

The mother evades; the father, evidently quite outside the pale of such intimate conversation, follows his daily routine undisturbed . . . and what they stoutly maintained despite their doctor's warnings "never could happen to our daughter," happened.

Joan Parker, whose resemblance to Mary Brian one can't help noticing, rolls up laurels for herself as the girl. Minna Gombell is cast as the mother, and Willard Mack, as the doctor.

A fable film, "Rough on Rats;" Jack Haley in a comedy short, "Nothing But the Tooth," and "Hook and Line," a tid-bit for fishermen, also are included on the Davis and Sheridan Square bills.

Playhouse Ready for Final Presentation

"Dangerous Corner," by J. B. Priestly, the sixth and last production of the Pittsburgh Summer Playhouse this season, begins Monday night in Arnold School and will continue throughout the week. Directed by B. F. McKee, Jr., the following cast will appear: Helen Wayne, Frances Emerson, Dorothy Devlin, Mary Alice Yaste, R. F. Manning, William Koehler and Donald Gallagher. Of these, Frances Emerson, Mary Alice Yaste and R. E. Manning are new additions to the Playhouse acting company.

Catherine Doucet to Make Screen Debut

Catherine Doucet will play the lead in Rachel Crothers' "As Husbands Go," as her screen debut. She will also play the role of "Emmy" in Lasky's screen version of the play. Philip Merivale and Jay Warde have been cast for important roles.

Olsen, Ethel Shutta at Willows Tonight

George Olsen and his nationally known orchestra of 18 instrumental specialists, with Ethel Shutta and Joe Morrison as vocal soloists, will be heard in person at the Willows, Oakmont, tonight.

GIANTS MAKE BIG STRIDE TOWARD FLAG

NO MATTER HOW the big pennant races may result, there won't be any doubt as to the identity of the greatest pitcher of the year in the major leagues. If there has been any question about it before, it would be dispelled by the brilliant finish that Carl Hubbell is making to demonstrate that he is in a class of his own among the hurlers of 1933. A short while ago there was a suspicion that the Giant southpaw ace might be weakening a bit after the strain of setting a new National League record of 46 consecutive innings without allowing a run, but he has knocked that notion higher than a kite by coming back stronger than ever.

Carl Hubbell

Nothing but shutout pitching could have saved the league leaders from defeat in that very important first game in Boston yesterday, but Hubbell delivered it with a 10-inning blank, his tenth whitewashing job and his twentieth victory of the season. And he did it only on two days' rest after hurling another shutout on Tuesday. In the last seven days he won three games and allowed only one run. There's nobody else within a mile of him.

SOUTHPAW STAR MAKES SLUMP IMPROBABLE

An extended losing streak by the Giants is the only thing that could enable any rival to beat them out, and even with Johnny Vergez lost, the chances are against that as long as Hubbell is in working order. The Terrys may drop a couple of games, but then the screwball ace steps in and stops it, despite the fact that his mates rarely hit behind him. Little chance of opponents beating him when they can't even score on him.

That double victory over the Braves yesterday carried New York a great stride pennantward. Though the Pirates, behind Larry French's fine pitching, hung up their seventh straight win to capture second place and shake the extra-inning jinx by winning an overtime battle after losing their last five marathons, they were half a game farther behind the Giants today than yesterday. If the Terrys win only 16 of their remaining 31 games, or practically only an even break, to beat them out the Pirates will have to win 23 out of 29, the Braves will have to win 21 out of 27, the Cubs will have to win 23 out of 26, and the Cardinals will have to win 23 out of 25. For Pittsburgh to take the pennant, it will be necessary for the Giants to lose in 31 games nine more than the Pirates lose in 29.

ANOTHER DEAN TIPPED AS FUTURE STAR

The trouble that opposing National League clubs have experienced at the hands of Pitcher Dean, of the Cardinals, may be doubled in years to come, for there is another member of the family coming up and his boosters go so far as to predict he will be as good a pitcher as his brother Dizzy.

Earl Mack, scout for the A's, pronounces Paul Dean the best hurler in the American Association, and other ivory hunters share his opinion. Paul has won 20 games for Columbus while losing only six. The Yanks made a big cash

HARMSWORTH BOATS SET FOR RACE

ALGONAC, Mich., Sept. 2. — (AP.)—Two of the world's fastest speed boats, the huge eighteen Miss America X, defender, and the tiny Miss Britain III, challenger, weighing less than two tons—had been tuned up to the minute as their pilots, Gar Wood and Hubert Scott-Paine, awaited the starter's gun to send them away on the first race of the Harmsworth trophy series in the St. Clair River this afternoon.

The two boats presented a sharp contrast in design and appearance. The big defender, 36 feet long with four motors developing 6,800 horsepower and built along conventional speed boat lines, was a familiar sight to Harmsworth fans who have seen most of Wood's Miss America line.

BRITISH BOAT FAST

The little British challenger was a strange sight to most local speed boat enthusiasts, not only by comparison with the high-riding mahogany-hulled Miss America X, but because of her revolutionary appearance, which roughly resembles a pontoon on a raft with only a few inches of free space above the water line.

Wood and his mechanician, Orlin Johnson, ride behind their motors; Scott-Payne and his mechanician, Gordon Thomas, sit in front of their engine, a Napier-Schneider Cup motor developing but 1,375 horsepower.

The British challenger has shown in the tests that his craft could be manuevered at high speed, the maximum of which has been carefully guarded, making pivot-like turns, and that it had none of the faults the skeptics had predicted.

DODGE MAY COMPETE

There was a possibility that a third speed boat might enter the Harmsworth field. The craft was the Delphine V of Horave Dodge.

Dodge attempted to give his stepped-up boat a trial on the Detroit River yesterday, but a swarm of small boats cruising over the water after the Gold Cup races forced him to abandon the effort. Whether he would make another trial early today or enter his boat without a trial was not known.

VERGEZ ON MEND

BOSTON, Sept. 2. — (INS.) — Johnny Vergez, New York Giants' third baseman, today was reported much improved following an operation for appendicitis. The Californian was stricken during the opening game of the Braves-Giants series, his condition was such that he was able to listen in on the games over the radio yesterday.

OUIMET'S GOLF

By FRANCIS OUIMET

Former National Amateur and Open Golf Champion

When Jerome D. Travers was the outstanding American amateur golfer, he expressed the opinion that putting was the most important stroke in golf because it won matches and assisted in low scoring. It is my opinion that there is too much conceding of putts and that the game would be better and more interesting if players in match play competition would have an understanding beforehand that there be no concessions of any kind.

Francis Ouimet

There is, of course, no way of telling how many of the conceded putts would be missed if the golfer were called upon to hole out, but a certain percentage would be missed. So many little putts have been missed in tense moments that I think it would be a good idea to insist that every putt be put into the hole regardless of the situation. In medal play competitions we are obliged to hole everything and a similar match play rule could be established taking the edge off that form of play.

LITTLE PUTTS COUNT

There are times when everyone holes a putt from the edge of the green, but there is a decided element of luck in this. It is the three, four and six-foot putts that are vitally important, and it was at these distances that Travers was unexcelled. Toward the end of his golfing career, Travers had lost practically all his skill with the wooden clubs, and it was his uncanny putting that won matches for him time after time. Travers' estimate of the importance of putting is just as accurate today, in my opinion, judging from results in recent competitions.

Oftentimes a wild tee shot can be offset by a fine putt. An iron shot that winds up in a trap sometimes can be made up for by a fine putt, but nothing is more damaging, after two fine shots have been put together, than for the player to require three putts. Not only does it cost him the hole, but it robs him of his confidence and hole after hole he is wondering whether he is going to need three putts.

CONCEDING A CHAMPIONSHIP

A conceded putt, which stands out in my memory, came in the final match I played against Henry Topping in the French amateur championship in 1914. I was 3 up and 4 to play, and my ball was four feet from the cup in three. Topping had played four and his ball was two or three inches from the hole. Of course, my four-footer meant the hole and the match. However, before I had an opportunity to try it, Topping reached over, knocked my ball away, and thus conceded me the match. It was a sporting thing for Topping to do, but it is more than likely that the putt could have been missed, as it so happened it was a rolling one.

Many golfers see poor sportsmanship in asking an opponent to hole out easy putts. The element of sportsmanship does not enter into it. The game of golf is to get the ball into the hole and too liberal concessions take much of the pleasure out of the game.

DUDLEY LEADS IN TOURNEY AT HERSHEY

HERSHEY, Pa., Sept. 2.—(AP.)—An imposing array of golfers tee off today in the second half of the $1,500, 72-hole Hershey invitation professional golf championship, with big Ed Dudley, of Concordville, the pace-setting Ryder Cup star, in the van.

Unruffled by the difficult 6,990-yard course and its five par-five holes, Dudley toured the first 36 holes yesterday in 145, carding a par 73 on his morning round and breaking par with a 72 in the afternoon.

In his wake came Dick Metz, of Deal, N. J., the Pennsylvania open titleholder, with 73-75—148 and two former national champions tied for third place at 149, Johnny Farrel, of Mamaroneck, scored 73-76 yesterday, and George Von Elm turned in a 77-72.

Pittsburgh's contingent failed to make much of a showing. Sam Parks, Jr., pro at the South Hills Country Club, had two rounds of 77 for 154. Ted Luther also had a 154, scoring a 75-79, and Vincent Eldred took 160 with rounds of 79 and 81.

Highland Keeps Club Team Title

The Highland Country Club, for the fourth year in succession, is the proud possessor of the Western Pennsylvania club team golf championship. The Highlanders won the title again yesterday at Westmoreland, scoring 22 points to 19 for Shannopin, 18½ for Oakmont and 12½ for St. Clair.

Fritz Stout, Jr., of Shannopin, played the best golf of the day, turning in a card of 36-33—69 in the morning, three under par.

PHILLIES BEATEN

STROUDSBURG, Pa., Sept. 2.—(AP.)—The Phillies stopped off for an exhibition game yesterday and took a 5-to-3 trimming at the hands of the Stroudsburg Poconos, an independent club. The score by innings:

Poconos 0 0 1 1 0 2 1 0 *—5	13	0

By CHARLES J. DOYLE

The fast-flying Pirates today seemed to be imbued with the feeling they were still very much in the National League flag fight, regardless of a strong tone to the contrary that grew out of the sensational double victory of Bill Terry's fighting Giants in Boston yesterday.

The optimism of the Buccos is a great thing. Confidence, when not misplaced, will move mountains. At the same time we cannot get around the fact that the Giants are seven full games ahead of the runnerup Buccos, who will have to step along at a very lively clip to accomplish the goal of their desires.

BUCS HAVE CHANCE

Let us dwell on the figures for a moment. You will note the Giants already have copped 75 contests. Perhaps you also know that 90 victories often lands the flag. Terry's club has 31 unplayed games on its card. That means the Giants could lose 16 of their remaining 31 battles and reach 90 victories.

For the sake of Pirate comparison let us presume that the Giants will win only 15 of their games. To clinch the flag, the Buccos then would have to take 22 out of their 29 games. These figures would obtain in such an eventuality:

	W.	L.
Pirates	91	63—.591
Giants	90	64—.584

It might be considered a rash bet to offer even money that the Giants will drop 16 of their 31 contests. Contrariwise, it would be considered a good gamble to wager that the Buccos will not cop 22 of their 29 games.

The camp of the Cardinals today did not hold the flag hopes that rested among the Pirates. But the Redbirds, losing their eleventh game of the season to the Pirates yesterday, fell nine games below the New Yorkers. As one of the Cardinal stars remarked:

"That double victory over the Braves just about put the Giants across."

All of which is written here with the reservations born of a sport that holds so much uncertainty. Moreover, the Giants must face the Pirates five times after they finish their six battles with the Braves, and those five

MISS VAN WIE, HELEN HICKS CLASH FOR TITLE

U. S. CHAMPION VICTOR OVER ENID WILSON

BULLETIN.

EXMOOR COUNTRY CLUB, HIGHLAND PARK, Ill., Sept. 2.—Virginia Van Wie won the first hole with a par 5 to Helen Hicks' 6 as they opened their 36-hole match for the Women's National golf championship here today. Miss Hicks won the second hole with a birdie 4.

HIGHLAND PARK, Ill., Sept. 2.—(AP.)—With the title safe for America, Virginia Van Wie, of Chicago, was challenged for her women's national golf championship by her own house guest, Helen (Billy) Hicks, of New York, today.

Virginia Van Wie

The two great friends and famous rivals, were matched against each other as sole survivors of a week's play in a 36-hole struggle over Exmoor's rolling hills for the crown each has worn once.

MISS WILSON LOSES

It was an all-America final with England's great champion, Enid Wilson, on the sidelines. The result was a toss-up, and the gallyryites who studied the figures have up trying to pick the winner after discovering that both have been breaking par in their drive to the throne room of United States women's golf.

Miss Hicks, who won the title in 1931 and then became the only champion to fail in the qualifying round the succeeding year, found herself in a peculiar spot for the struggle. For the past month, she has been visiting Miss Van Wie in Michigan and near Exmoor while she drilled to keep intact a winning streak that has captured seven sectional titles already this year.

It was Miss Van Wie who put Miss Wilson on the sidelines for the final match today. As the English champion's game collapsed suddenly, Virginia shot one of her best games and crushed her, 6 and 5, yesterday.

The tall girl from Nottlingham, one of England's golfing immortals because of her three straight victories in the British championship, won only one hole, the tenth, from the American champion, who gained a 6-up lead at the turn with a medal of 37, one over men's par, and then played safe to win.

GALLANT IN DEFEAT

Enid accepted her defeat gallantly and based her poor showing on the fact that she practiced on shots for three hours Thursday night and lost the touch.

Miss Hicks was three under par as she routed Maureen Orcutt, of Walworth, N. J., 6 and 4. Maureen held her even through five holes, but her game collapsed after that and Helen went on to win easily.

Since last Monday, both finalists have played 77 holes. Miss Hicks has bettered par by five shots and Miss Van Wie by four.

EXPLANATIONS OF RIPLEY'S CARTOONS OF YESTERDAY: VERSATILE PAUL REVERE—This patriot, politician, soldier, gold-and-silversmith artist, engraver, mechanic and inventor, bell-founder, industrial pioneer, did not make the ride for which he is famous. He was despatched by Joseph Warren to Lexington and Concord to warn the "minute men" of the expedition sent thither by Gage. Revere reached only Lexington, where he was joined by William Dawes and Doctor Samuel Prescott. According to Revere's own account, he was arrested by a British patrol near Lexington, so that he was unable to proceed. Dawes was intercepted a few minutes later and the man who really completed the ride was Doctor Prescott, who rode on to Lincoln and Concord and gave the first alarm to the "minute men". Doctor Prescott happened to be calling on a girl in Lexington on the momentous night when he met Revere. He later was captured by the British and died in captivity at Halifax. THE MOST ROUNDABOUT MAIL ROUTE—The Island of Guam, which is a United States possession, is in plain sight of Rota Island, but the latter is subject to Japan as part of the Mariana group. A letter addressed to Rota from Guam is dispatched to Manila, 1,504 miles away, thence it travels to Yokohama, Japan, 1,550 miles away, and reaches Rota after an additional trip of 1,600 miles via Saipan Island. All this while, the destination has been only 30 miles away from Guam.

TOMORROW: GREAT AUTHORS' REAL NAMES

GIANT MOUND ACES TOO MUCH FOR BRAVES

Associated Press.

Bill Terry led a couple of pitching aces yesterday the Redskins couldn't trump, the New York Giants swept both games of a doubleheader, increased their National League lead to seven games and dropped the Braves into third place, a single percentage point behind the revived Pittsburgh Pirates.

Trailing two victories to one now, the Braves needed to snare all three remaining games to make any appreciable slash in the Giants' heavy margin. A single game was on the card today and another doubleheader tomorrow will close the series.

48,000 SEE FRAYS

Forty-eight thousand persons, one of the largest crowds in Boston baseball history, looked on with not a little pain as first Carl Hubbell, lean master of the screwball, and then Fred Fitzsimmons, portly right hander, stopped the Braves' spectacular rush which many Boston fans hoped would lead to just such another pennant as George Stallings' "Miracle Men" achieved in 1914.

Hubbell, the league's leading southpaw, was supreme in the first game which the Giants finally captured in the tenth, 2-0, after wasting one scoring opportunity after another. Hubbell was reached for only four hits as he outpitched Fred Frankhouse by a wide margin and hung up his twentieth victory and tenth shutout of the campaign.

Except for one inning, Fitzsimmons was as effective in the second game, and the Terrymen romped away to a 5-3 triumph. The Giants' two pitching aces added insult to injury by driving in the winning run in each battle.

BUCS WIN SEVENTH

Hubbell, working as smoothly as he has all season, would have had an easy triumph had his teammates discovered a scoring punch. It was not until the tenth that the league leaders broke through, although they filled the bases in the first, third, seventh and ninth.

Pittsburgh, meanwhile, hung up its seventh successive triumph as Pie Traynor's single in the eleventh broke up a great pitchers' duel between Larry French and Bill Hallahan and gave the Corsairs a 2-1 verdict over the St. Louis Cardinals. The Cincinnati Reds bunched six hits with eight walks to whip the Chicago Cubs, 7-3.

In the only American League games, the Boston Red Sox rallied for two runs in the twelfth to beat the New York Yankees, 4-2, and Jimmy Foxx hit his thirty-seventh homer as the Athletics trounced the league-leading Washington Senators, 12-3.

offer for the younger Dean, but the Cards own him and will keep him for their own future use.

POOR TRIP MAKES RUTH REALIZE FINISH

It was the depths to which he fell on the western trip completed by the Yankees this week that made scribes feel Babe Ruth had reached the end of his rope. Though the Bambino has denied admitting it, critics and fans in the western towns have become convinced that the recent tour was the final one of Ruth's career as a player.

Babe Ruth

The trip was the most dismal of the Babe's baseball life. Playing in 11 games he made only six hits in 36 times at bat for the puny average of .167, and he drove in only three runs. The scribes say he was missing fast balls right through the middle of the plate, was rolling weakly to the second baseman or striking out as never before, adding that his fielding was slow, his old nonchalance had given way to worry and dejection, and that in general he was no longer the ball player.

RUPPERT FACES PROBLEM AS BABE WANES

There is no doubt that Ruth will become a manager after he quits playing, but where? A challenge to Col. Ruppert looms as the clock rushes relentlessly toward the Bambino's finish as a player.

Joe McCarthy's contract has two years more to run, but will the Yankee owner dare to release Ruth to another club without giving him a chance to try his hand as a pilot? If the New York public demands that Babe be given a managerial trial, can the club boss afford to turn a deaf ear? The situation is not one to promote peaceful sleep for Ruppert these nights.

MASSERA UNBEATEN IN LAST 21 FIGHTS

In getting a draw with Steve Hamas in a 10-round bout in New York the other night, Charley Massera, Monongahela product, hung up the twenty-first consecutive fight in which he has not been defeated.

Massera has had 28 battles all told, and his manager, Eddie Borden, contends that his record as a whole has been surpassed by few heavyweights who jumped right into professional competition without any amateur experience.

COAST ALSO TO HAVE PRO GRID LEAGUE

It appears that Art Rooney grabbed Angel Brovelli for his Pittsburgh professional football team just in the nick of time, for Pacific Coast promoters have decided to form a pro league and no doubt the former St. Mary's fullback would have been one of the first stars sought.

The proposed Coast league will have eight or ten teams in cities yet to be selected, and plans to operate from October through January, the longest season on record.

Paul Cuba

CUBA WITH PHILLY PROS

Speaking of pro football, not all of the former home college gridders going into the National League this fall will be found playing under Pittsburgh colors. One of the local performers to cast his lot with an outside club is Paul Cuba, ex-Pitt tackle, who has signed a contract to play for the Philadelphia Eagles in the big loop and will be seen here in the role of a visiting enemy. Cuba completed his college playing career with the Panthers last fall, and was rated one of the best tackles of the year.

The Eagles also have signed Swede Olsen, crack tackle at Penn a couple of years ago, and previously they acquired two other good men for the same position in Gentry, of Oklahoma, and Turnbow, of Mississippi. With Cuba now added, Lud Wray, manager and coach of the Eagles, is confident his tackles are equal to any on the commercial gridiron.

REIS CAPTURES GOLD CUP

DETROIT, Sept. 2.—(AP.)—An 11-year-old mahogany-hull speedboat from Lake George, N. Y., El Lagarto, owned and piloted by George Reis, captured the Gold Cup, second ranking trophy of the powerboat world, by finishing first in two heats and taking a second place in the final 30-mile race on the Detroit River yesterday.

The victory was determined under the American Powerboat Association's point system of scoring, El Lagarto winning 1161 points; Horace Dodge's defending Delphine IV, which took second in the first two heats and won the final heat, 1122, and Delphine VII, driven by Mrs. Delphine Dodge Baker, of Washington, 648.

A new race record was established in the thirtieth running of the Gold Cup race. Bill Horn, in the Delphine IV, set a new 90-mile mark of 60.277 miles an hour.

In the third heat, Reis, needing only a third place to lift the cup, apparently took no chances, and Delphine IV, as well as Delphine VII, preceded him across the line. Closely on his stern was Delphine IX, brought out for another trial.

Speed on the straightaways apparently won for the Lake George boat, Horn, last year's winner, and driver of Delphine IV, today said he was unable to overtake Reis on the straight stretches.

NATIONAL NET PLAY OPENS

FOREST HILLS, N. Y., Sept. 2.—(AP.)—An all-star international field of 90 today opened fire on the national singles tennis championship Ellsworth Vines has held for the past two years.

Vines himself, despite a disastrous campaign both here and abroad, ranked as one of the four outstanding favorites along with big Frank Shields, of New York, unbeaten on grass this year; Jack Crawford, of Australia, French and British champion, and Fred Perry, of England, whose smashing play at Auteuil enabled Great Britain to capture the Davis Cup from France.

Twenty-six matches were on the opening day's program so that the field might be cut to 64 for the second round on Monday. Both Vines and Crawford drew first round byes and will see no action until Labor Day.

SHIELDS MEETS DONOVAN

Shields, whose successive triumphs in the Crescent-Hamilton, Seabright, Meadow Club and Newport tournaments earned him the No. 2 place behind Vines in the American list, tackled the one-time Fordham ace, E. Ramey Donovan. Perry, No. 2 on the foreign list, was to play Edward W. Burns, Jr., of New York.

Among foreign stars, Ryosuke Nunoi, of Japan, was to face Eddie Jacobs, of Baltimore, while Adrian Quist and Don Turnbull, of Australia, encountered Hudson Hamm, Jr., of Fort Lauderdale, Fla., and Herbert L. Bowman, New York veteran, respectively.

TOURNEY DELAYED

WESTMONT, Pa., Sept. 2.—The first annual Allegheny Mountain tennis championships are slated to get under way on the clay courts of the Westmont Tennis Club here today. Inaugural play of the event, originally scheduled for yesterday afternoon, was postponed by last-minute committee action because the majority of out-of-town contestants requested permission to report today.

The men's singles seeded list will be chosen from among such luminaries as B. F. Arkle, Wheeling ace; Frank Broida, Billy O'Loughlin, Tack Hammer, Dave Devlin, Junior Kunkle, John Brown and Eddie Alcorn.

The program will get under way at 2 o'clock and will run upwards of three hours, and it is expected to draw a throng of upwards of 25,000 persons.

The entries include Dr. J. S. Saling, Jimmy Altman, W. W. Neeley, Dale Perry, Fred Mechling and Misses Caroline Cooper and Ruth Strayer.

The Oakmont Chamber of Commerce trophy, on which one leg has been won, will be in competition.

Nine May Start In Chicago Derby

CHICAGO, Sept. 2.—(INS.)—Nine leading three-year-olds were scheduled to resume the argument of supremacy today in the revival of the $10,000 added Chicago Derby at one mile and a quarter at Old Hawthorne.

Those listed to start are At Top, Mr. Khayyam, Barn Swallow, Okapi, Royal Blunder, Big Red, Sarada, Esseff and Gay World.

Mr. Khayyam was the favorite at 8 to 5 odds, principally on the basis of his victories in the American Derby, the Wood Memorial and the Chesapeake stakes. Next in choice was F. A. Griffith's Sarada, listed at 5 to 2.

Mr. Khayyam will pack the top weight of 123 pounds.

'EKKIE' AFTER SEVENTH WIN

SARATOGA SPRINGS, N. Y., Sept. 2.—(AP.)—Saratoga's 27-day race meeting closes today with 15 2-year-olds matching strides in the $40,000 Hopeful and C. V. Whitney's Equipoise seeking his seventh successive victory in the fifty-third running of the Saratoga Cup over one and three-quarter miles.

Although it was the longest distance he has ever run, Equipoise, holder of the world record of 1:34 2-5 for one mile, was the prohibitive choice at 1 to 5 to whip three other speedy colts, including Mrs. Dodge Sloane's Caesar's Ghost, winner of three stakes at the Spa. Victory would run Equipoise's total earnings close to the $320,000 mark.

Mrs. Sloane's entry of High Quest, rated by many as the outstanding candidate for juvenile honors, and National Anthem ruled the favorite at 5 to 2 to win the major share of the Hopeful purse. The powerful trio from Mrs. Payne Whitney's Greentree Stable, including Spy Hill, First Minstrel and Black Buddy, was the second choice at 7 to 2.

Two other drivers, John Gerber, of Stanwood, Ia., and Bob Saul, of Paterson, N. J., crashed through the fence.

BASEBALL COMEDY

—By NICK ALTROCK—

PHILADELPHIA, Sept. 1.—Next to putting fire escapes on Grant's Tomb, about the most useless thing to do is wait around for the New York Giants to crack. The experts have wasted an entire season just watching for the first crevice in the Polo Grounds outfit and they might just as well have been waiting for Niagara Falls to flow upstream.

Nick Altrock

It's a funny situation, too. When McGraw resigned and Bill Terry was awarded the managership, it was like Bill getting a nest of wasps for a Christmas present. Because at that time the Giants' percentage figures read like the lowest quotation on Peruvian bonds.

But all through the current season the Joints have been playing .600 baseball without borrowing a couple of hundred points from the R. F. C. And that, ladies and gemmun, is sumpin.

New Jersey Shot Wins Rifle Title

CAMP PERRY, O., Sept. 2.—(AP.)—Hitting the targets in a stiff wind for eight bulls eyes and a score of 197 out of a possible 200, W. R. Walsh, of Union City, N. J., won the Winbledon match in the national small bore rifle championships here yesterday against a field of 97 contestants.

T. Samsoe, of Perth Amboy, N. J., was a close second with a score of 197.

Dr. Russell Gardner, of Troy, O., and H. A. Yearsley, of Piqua, O., won the short range two-man team match against a field of 54 other teams with a total score of 794 out of a possible 800.

HEIMACH RELEASED

NEW YORK, Sept. 2.—(AP.)—The Brooklyn Dodgers have announced the unconditional release of Fred Heimach, veteran southpaw pitcher. Heimach, who won nine and lost four with the Dodgers last year, has appeared in only three games since June 24, once as a relief and twice as a starting hurler. He failed to finish both of his starts.

MEINE TO HURL

Flushed with their seventh straight triumph, a 2-1 11-inning success over the Redbirds, the Buccos today were all set to take on the St. Louis boys this afternoon. Heine Meine will twirl for the Buccos, with Bill Walker or Dazzy Vance doing the honors for the Mound City entry.

Larry French and Bill Hallahan staged a classic southpaw duel yesterday, Pie Traynor's ringing single in the eleventh with one out scoring Paul Waner with the winning run. French allowed only six hits in the long game, and Hallahan was just about as clever as the Pittsburgh star.

Traynor was the spark plug of the home offensive. Pie led off in the seventh with a dandy triple to left center. The Pirates had to get Pie across as Bob O'Farrell scored in the third on a walk, two infield outs and Ethan Allen's single.

Hallahan would not let Vaughan smack over the tying run, but Suhr did the trick splendidly with a single to center.

Brother Paul walked in the eleventh with one out. Paul scooted to second with the important run when O'Farrell allowed a Hallahan shoot to bounce out of his glove. Pie then peppered the ball to left and Paul scored the needed tally.

PRICE TANGLE WEIGHS DOWN STEEL TRADE

By B. E. V. LUTY

The business of buying and selling steel has been in a chaotic condition on account of the setting up of base prices and lists of definitions, extras, differentials, etc., under the code. Sellers have had to proceed very cautiously while buyers are awaiting further information. The result has been a lightness of trading which furnishes no reflection of the underlying strength in demand.

Production of steel ingots has continued to decline, the rate this week being about 45 per cent of capacity, or four points decrease from last week and a total decrease of 14 points from the high rate attained in July. On the upgrade a rate of 45 per cent was reached for the week ended June 17, and the descent has been slightly less steep than the ascent.

The code of fair competition for the iron and steel industry was approved by President Roosevelt Saturday, August 19, the code providing that it become effective in 10 days, whereby it was necessary for all producers individually to file their base prices with the American Iron and Steel Institute by last Tuesday, while the directors of the institute approve and issue lists of discounts, extras, etc., representing current practice, to be uniform throughout the trade. An enormous amount of work has been involved in reducing trade practices to uniform and specifically defined terms.

COVER SEPTEMBER

Buyers very generally are covered by old contracts for deliveries through the remainder of this month, chiefly at present or intermediate prices as almost all the business booked at old prices, before any advances were made, has been worked off. Mill operations this month will be helped by such specifying as is induced against these contracts by the prices and terms which have just gone into effect on new business. It was stipulated in contracts made for the quarter that specifications should be filed in time for completion of shipments by September 30.

The code stipulates that no contract shall be made for a calendar quarter earlier than four months before the end of the quarter, hence prices as originally filed were not at the moment applicable to fourth-quarter business. New prices may be filed at any time, but do not become effective until 10 days after date of filing. Technically, producers have until September 20 to file fourth-quarter prices but it is unlikely there will be any important changes. In the novel circumstances making of fourth-quarter contracts is not likely to proceed rapidly.

Present finished steel prices do not average more than $3 a ton over prices published in the early months of the year as representing the market, but there is a complete withdrawal of concessions, whereby prices realized on shipments will average more than $3 a ton increase. Present prices are $9 a ton under the average quoted in 1926, often referred to as an objective in the recovery of commodity prices generally.

FEW CHANGES

Base prices filed represented few changes in the case of steel and only one of importance, covering cold rolled sheets for the automobile and furniture trades, where there is an advance over the previously quoted market of $3 a ton but a larger advance to the automobile trade as it had been enjoying concessions.

Pig iron prices were advanced $1 a ton for the majority of districts and 50 cents for others. Pig iron prices were stationary in the first three months of the year, advances beginning in April and now totaling an average of fully $3 a ton.

The automobile trade appears to be increasing its activity after the slight declines of the last two months, and is endeavoring to place all specifications against expiring contracts the mills are willing to accept.

In other steel consuming lines no swings of any importance are observed. The Federal building program does not seem to be much nearer producing actual steel tonnages than two months ago. Railroad demand is still insignificant but something may come of the letter addressed early this week by Joseph B. Eastman, railroad co-ordinator to railway presidents suggesting repair and replacement of rolling stock in anticipation of heavier traffic.

The scrap market has weakened a trifle through there being some offerings to the large dealers when the latter have little tonnage left in short contracts. Heavy melting is now quotable at $13 to $13.50, a decline of 25 cents, following a similar decline over a fortnight ago.

BUSINESS

National City Bank Explains Halt In Buying

—By GEORGE H. SNYDER—

SUMMER DULLNESS was not the only factor in the recent decline in business activity. The certainty of rising prices due to the imposition of industrial codes and the effects of an inflationary policy were responsible for buying in advance of requirements in the spring and early summer. With these higher prices about to become an actuality, the urge for manufacturers, wholesalers and retailers to buy in advance of needs is disappearing.

This, in brief, summarizes the explanation of the current pause in industrial activity made by the National City Bank of New York in the monthly review of economic conditions.

The bank declares that trade in primary markets, and industrial operations generally, have slackened somewhat during August after advancing between March and July to the highest level since the spring of 1931. In this slackening, the usual summer dullness which ordinarily would have been felt a month or six weeks earlier was plainly a factor. The chief explanation, according to the bank, is in the character of the preceding advance, which was unparalleled in speed and extent, but was influenced by extraordinary measures tending to raise prices.

* * *

Future Needs Were Covered

IN EXPLAINING the recent hesitancy in business activity, the bank declares:

"With these measures going into effect, and natural business recovery setting in upon the restoration of confidence after the bank holiday, far-sighted business men naturally attempted to cover their needs for commodities and merchandise as far ahead as was practicable, and the accompanying speculation in securities and staple commodities developed. The greatest recovery in prices and in industrial operations ever experienced in an equivalent period was the result.

"During the past few weeks, however, these influences for higher prices in the primary markets have gradually been discounted, and the inducements to buy ahead have become less compelling. The speculation in stocks, grains and cotton has collapsed, with results which need no description. In many industries the higher costs due to the measures cited have now been added to prices, and the factor of beating the gun is no longer present. In others manufacturers have [illegible] the goods they are able to make at former costs, and do not yet know what their new costs will be, and the situation is temporarily in confusion. Doubtless, also, the speed of the advance itself inspired conservatism. Operations in the industries generally had increased so rapidly as to regain within four or five months one-half of the volume lost over three and one-half years; and it was feared by all good judges, including Gen. Johnson, that production at [illegible] rate was not only exceeding current requirements, but was running ahead of prospective retail distribution."

* * *

Retail Volume Is Encouraging

WHILE INDUSTRIAL production has been declining, the bank finds that the most encouraging showing has been in the various branches of retail trade.

Automobile sales have been well sustained during the summer, though usually July and August are very slow as compared with the spring months. After turning out 253,000 vehicles in June, the largest monthly total in more than two years, and keeping output closely in line with sales, the industry showed only a nominal decline to 233,000 in July. Moreover, the August recession in sales has likewise been nominal, according to preliminary reports, and the best evidence that the factories are still finding a market is the continued deferment of a switch to new models. The tire manufacturers also are having a long selling season, and have curtailed production but moderately. Rubber consumption in July was 67 per cent greater than in July, 1932.

August clearance sales by retail stores have been markedly successful. The public is upon notice that prices are working higher and naturally people have bought what they can in anticipation.

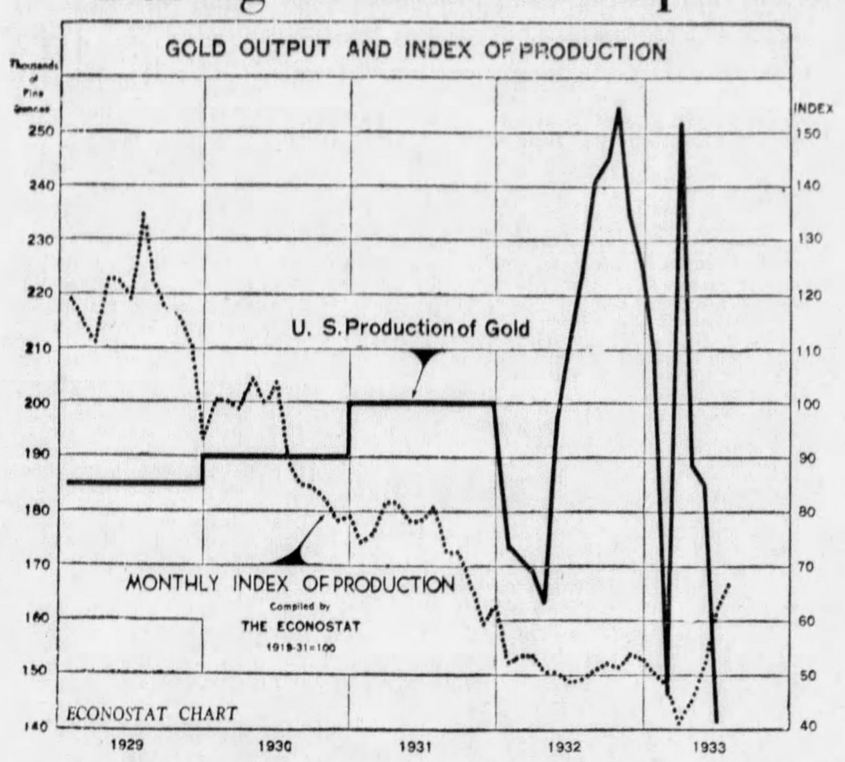
Gold Miners Speed Production During Periods of Depression



By JOSEPH STAGG LAWRENCE

Editor, The Econostat

It has been said that gold is a commodity which thrives on adversity and suffers from prosperity. The above chart would seem to corroborate this statement. During the last five years we note that American gold output was at a low point at the very time that business in general was playing at the peak.

During the long, hard years through which the country has just passed gold appears to have thrived. The output in America has increased from an average of 167,000 ounces monthly in 1928 to 187,000 ounces in 1933. This represents an increase in gold production of 12 per cent, taking place in a period when industrial production as measured by the Econostat index showed a decline of 55.3 per cent.

The reason, of course, is not far to seek and is one which has been stated repeatedly during the course of the last few years. Gold in a gold standard country is the only commodity whose price is fixed. All other goods and services fluctuate in terms of this stable commodity. In our country the law specified that one dollar was equal to 23.22 grains of pure gold. It is the price pegging of the yellow metal which accounts for its inverse fortunes.

When other goods decline in value the operator of a gold mine pays less for his labor and supplies, while receiving the same for his output. As a result, his profit margin expands and he has this greatest of all business incentives to increase his production. As a result, he works his property more intensively and searches for other ores which, on the basis of reduced cost, can now be worked profitably.

It is this development which accounts for the paradoxical favor of the gold stocks during the period of the depression. At the present time producers of gold and the owners of gold stocks are apprehensive lest the return of prosperity bring with it, as it always has in the past, hard times for the gold producer.

The NRA program of higher wages and the efforts of the government to stimulate higher prices of all commodities are champagne for most producers, but hemlock juice for the gold miner. His position today would in all respects be just as favorable as it was five months ago if the government would permit him to realize the natural world market price for his product.

He has agitated valorously to persuade Uncle Sam to raise the ban on the export of gold. These efforts have been successful to the extent of securing at least modifications to the President's gold order.

GLASS DEMAND SPREADS OUT

The American Glass Review declares September finds activity in the glass manufacturing world spreading out over a wide front.

The month will see substantial improvement in more than one division with the expectation that there will be new high ground in view before the advent of the last quarter of the year.

Most of the current highlights, perhaps, may be seen in the flat glass group, where jobber and manufacturer concur in the expectation of brisk days ahead. In preparation for these, distributors and representatives of producers are gathering together in divisional meetings to discuss market reactions and from them try to derive some approximation of what the fall volume will be.

Demand for flat glass and in particular, plate glass, proved considerably better in August than it had been throughout July. The figures for the month just ended compare favorably with those of June.

CAR LOADINGS GAIN CONTRACTS

WASHINGTON, Sept. 2.—(AP.)—The American Railway Association had announced today loadings of revenue freight for the week ended August 26, totaled 631,998 cars, a decrease of 2,847 cars under the preceding week and an increase of 94,231 cars over the corresponding week of last year.

The association said grain and grain products, livestock and coal showed increases over the preceding week, but that coke, ore, forest products and miscellaneous merchandise in less than carload freight showed mostly small decreases.

All commodities, however, showed increases over the corresponding week last year except livestock, grain and grain products and merchandise less than car load freight.

FIREPROOFING OFFERS PLAN

In order to preserve its working capital to meet increased business and also increased costs under the NRA program, National Fireproofing Corporation has offered holders of its debentures maturing in 1947, in lieu of the 2¾ per cent coupon due on September 1, 1933, 1 per cent in cash and 1¾ per cent in a two-year interest bearing note.

The corporation agrees not to pay any dividends until all such notes shall have been paid or funds for the payment thereof duly set aside for such payment, and also the corporation will continue to comply with the provision of the sinking fund requirements under which the debentures were issued.

In view of certain questions that have been raised under the federal securities act of 1933, it is not known at this time whether or not a trust company can act as depository, or whether the exchange will have to be effected directly with the corporation.

Definite information will be mailed to debenture holders as to where they are to send their coupons, at the earliest possible time.

Major Markets Observe Triple Holiday

The important security and commodity exchanges throughout the country today began marking an extended Labor Day holiday. Major markets in New York, Pittsburgh and other leading cities will resume trading next Tuesday morning at the regular hours.

Today is the last scheduled Saturday closing of the New York Stock Exchange which more than a month ago, following the big markets of late July, decided to suspend the two-hour week-end session for the balance of the summer.

Wholesale and Jobbing Trade Conditions

NEW YORK, Sept. 2.—(AP.)—Tabloid review of business reported by Dun-Bradstreet in the four divisions of wholesale and jobbing, retail trade, manufacturing and industry and collections this week, compared with the corresponding period last year. Good (G), means above; fair (F), equal to; quiet (Q); slow (S), below last year; active (A).

Pittsburgh—General business conditions improved over last week. Wholesale and retail volume larger, with prices higher in most lines. Shoe prices up sharply. Further recession in steel output, but code has provided jobs for more men. Plate glass production about four times as large as last year. Output of bituminous coal, at higher rate; average for current month exceeds that of August, 1932, by fully 60 per cent; higher prices are anicipated under the code. Electrical equipment industry advancing operations steadily.

COPPER CODE SEEN BENEFIT TO INDUSTRY

NEW YORK, Sept. 2.—(AP.)—Specialists in copper who have been studying the industry's future under the NRA code—recently submitted by producers—conclude that highly beneficial developments may reasonably be expected in this field.

Marked improvement has characterized operating conditions in the copper industry since last April. In the domestic market, prices have advanced about 80 per cent above the level existing early this year. Demand has spurted sharply, but, meanwhile, production has been kept well under control.

CONSUMPTION SPURTS

As a result consumption has been running ahead of output for several months, with a resulting decrease of stocks of metal in producers' hands. Surplus stocks, however, are still regarded as unusually large for a healthy condition.

Students of the question expect that the industry's final code will retain some method of production control in addition to minimum wage and maximum hour provisions. In its present form the fair competition agreement classifies producers according to size and allocates a certain rate of production to each.

OUTLOOK BETTER

If continued at the code's prescribed rate for a year, domestic copper output, estimated by Standard Statistics, would total 205,450 tons. Domestic consumption during the entire year 1932 was 263,500 tons, so output under the code is regarded as sufficiently low to permit a substantial portion of the present excess of stocks of the red metal to be consumed.

In 1931, copper consumption stood at 451,033 tons, in 1930 the total was 632,508 tons and in 1929 a peak of 889,293 tons was reached. Thus, it is pointed out, a return to the relatively restricted 1931 rate of consumption would reduce stocks—under the present production quota—by some 250,000 tons.

A JOINT RESOLUTION

Proposing an amendment to article fifteen, section four of the Constitution of the Commonwealth of Pennsylvania.

Section 1. Be it resolved by the Senate and House of Representatives of the Commonwealth of Pennsylvania in General Assembly met, That the following amendment to the Constitution of the Commonwealth of Pennsylvania be, and the same is hereby, proposed, in accordance with the eighteenth article thereof:—

That section four of article fifteen is hereby amended to read as follows:

Section 4. The General Assembly is hereby authorized to provide for the consolidation of the county, poor districts, cities, boroughs and townships of the county of Allegheny, and the offices thereof, into a consolidated city and county, with the constitutional and legal capacity of a municipal corporation, to be known either as "Greater Pittsburgh" or "Metropolitan Pittsburgh" or "City of Pittsburgh (Metropolitan)," and to provide for a charter for its government, and to fix the name thereof in the charter. The said charter shall be submitted to the electors of said county at a special or general election to be provided for therein. If the majority of the electors, voting thereon in the county as a whole, and at least a majority of the electors voting thereon in each of a majority of the cities, boroughs and townships thereof, vote in the affirmative, the act shall take effect for the whole county.

If rejected, the said charter may be resubmitted by the county commissioners to the electors from time to time, but not oftener than once in two years, until adopted. Until a charter shall have been adopted as aforesaid, the General Assembly shall have the power to amend or modify the said charter in which event the charter as amended or modified shall be submitted and resubmitted as aforesaid.

It shall be competent, subject to the police power of the State, for the Legislature to provide in said charter:

I. For the exercise by the consolidated city of all the powers and duties vested in the county of Allegheny, and the poor districts thereof, and such other powers appropriate to a municipality as may be specified therein, except such powers as are specifically reserved by this section to the municipal divisions herein provided for.

II. For the election of a board of commissioners, by district and/or at large, by the electors of the consolidated city, the number to be fixed by the charter, in lieu of present county commissioners, in which board shall be vested all the powers of the consolidated city except as otherwise provided in the charter.

III. For the organization of a government for the consolidated city, and for the appointment and/or election of any officers thereof, created by the Constitution, or otherwise and to provide for their powers and duties.

IV. For the organization and reorganization of all courts other than those of record in the consolidated city, and for the appointment and/or election of the judges and officers thereof, and for the procedure thereof, including the right to provide that said court or courts be courts of record, which courts may exercise the jurisdiction, powers and rights of the magistrates, aldermen and justices of the peace, and such other jurisdiction and powers as may be conferred by law.

V. For the transfer to and the assumption by the consolidated city of the property and indebtedness of the county of Allegheny, and the poor districts thereof, and of such property and indebtedness of the cities, boroughs and townships thereof as relate to the powers and duties of said consolidated city, and to provide for an equitable adjustment and arrangement with respect thereto and the payment of such indebtedness, and, for this purpose, any taxation therein arising thereby, shall be uniform taxation within the meaning and intent of other provisions of the Constitution.

VI. For the assessment of property for taxation, the levying and collecting of taxes, and the payment of the cost of any public or municipal improvement, in whole or in part, by special assessment upon abutting and non-abutting property specially benefited thereby.

VII. For the creation, by the board of commissioners, of districts for the purpose of regulating the location, height, area, bulk and use of buildings and premises.

VIII. For the creation of indebtedness by the consolidated city within the limits now or hereafter imposed upon cities by other provisions of the Constitution. Such power to create indebtedness shall not impair the power of the municipal divisions, within the consolidated city, to create indebtedness within the limits now or hereafter imposed upon such municipalities by other provisions of the Constitution.

IX. For the creation, by the board of commissioners, of special districts for the purpose of carrying on or carrying out any public or municipal improvement, not for the exclusive benefit of any one municipal division; and, for the payment of the cost and maintenance of such property or improvement, or any part thereof, special taxes may be levied throughout such special districts, respectively, separate and apart from the general consolidated city tax.

Odds and Ends

AMONG MY visitors yesterday was Charles B. Dillingham, veteran theatrical producer and one of the sweetest characters that ever set foot on the treacherous alley known as Broadway. Dillingham, a man who earned such sums as $30,000 a week only 10 or 12 years ago, is in financial difficulties today. But if there is the slightest semblance of justice in this world of ours, he'll be back in the big money before long.

Strange to hear that Charlie Dillingham is involved in such messes as bankruptcy proceedings. He was born to be a spender, and a lack of money is not quite in keeping with his character. There never lived a man who was more generous or charitable when he was in the big dough.

But it's the old, old story. Those to whom he gave the most when they needed him, are no longer interested in his needs at the moment. If Charles Dillingham could only collect one-tenth of the money that is owed him, he would be a wealthy man today.

I do hope that Dillingham pulls out of his financial troubles. A grand character such as he is, deserves nothing but the best. He'll probably be angry at me for writing this because he is the one man who never complains about his ill fortune. He still has that broad smile and that decided sense of humor, and I guess he'll always have them no matter what happens.

You'll pardon me for saying all this, Charlie. I simply had to get it off my chest . . .

While we sat together, the conversation very naturally turned to the late Flo Ziegfeld. Dillingham and Flo were friends through the years, even though they were natural business rivals. They had some mutual enterprises, but the rivalry was always present nevertheless. Deep down, however, each man had great respect for the other.

As we talked, Dillingham unfolded a Ziegfeld tale that I am certain has never before been printed. With your permission, I'll tell it to you here.

Plenty of years ago, shortly before the time that Flo was married to the charming Billie Burke, Ziegfeld visited Palm Beach for the first time. Dillingham, long a society favorite, was living in a beautiful home down there and knew practically everyone of any social prominence in the vicinity.

He did a great deal of entertaining on a lavish scale and as soon as Flo was comfortably settled, he threw a great party in Ziegfeld's honor. He wanted Flo to know everyone of importance, and he wanted everyone of importance to know Flo. So he tossed an affair that is still remembered by some of the Palm Beach residents.

Among Dillingham's servants at the time was a French chef whom he had imported to this country at great expense. He paid the man a tremendous salary, and not without reason. According to Dillingham, there never was such a chef as that man—and there hasn't been one since.

At any rate, the party was a huge success. Everyone met Ziegfeld, and they all liked him immensely. After the meal, Flo told Dillingham just what he thought about it.

"It was swell of you, Charlie," he said, "and I'm not going to forget your kindness. I'm going to do plenty of entertaining of my own down here, and you've certainly given me a great start. Thanks very, very much."

Dillingham tossed the thanks off lightly.

"Nothing to it, Flo," he replied. "I was happy to have been able to do it. Don't mention it."

A few hours later—shortly before the party broke up—Dillingham found Ziegfeld in the kitchen. Flo was trying to hire his expert chef at double the salary! . . .

HERE'S some additional dope on the little contest I started a few weeks ago. I must apologize to those folks who are not particularly interested, but having started the thing, I suppose it's up to me to finish it. This is the last item about it, however, that will appear until after the contest is over.

I repeat the details now for the final time:

You are supplied with the first two paragraphs of a regular column for this space—and those two paragraphs must be used to start your story. You then add about 1,000 words, in which you develop the story as you think this column would do it. Here are the two paragraphs:

"Joe Green walked slowly in the direction of his home after a pretty dull day. Passing him, you would never give him a second glance. For Joe Green was so essentially, the average man that a second glance was never necessary.

"Everything about the man spelled the average. The way his clothes fitted him. That plodding look in his eyes. The very manner in which he walked. Average: that was Joe Green. And it was a thousand to one that he would go through life exactly as he was."

After that, you can do anything you wish with Joe Green. Change him completely at a moment's notice—or keep him average and make him a Congressman. He's your character. Do as you will with him.

First prize for the best column is $30, with $10 each for the two next best. The mail has grown to such proportions on this thing that I may have to award additional prizes. But I'll let that go for the time being. If my doctors get wise to the fact that I'm giving away $50 prizes these days, they're liable to transfer me to a different type of hospital.

You can submit as many columns as you wish. Address your replies to Mark Hellinger, 235 East Forty-fifth street, New York City. The contest does not close until September 10 at midnight, and any entries postmarked up to that hour from any spot in the United States will be accepted.

Good luck. And thanks. . . .

THE theatrical weekly, Billboard, recommends the following little story to my attention. It is a choice item, and I am glad to reprint it:

An actor, after a long period in which he was unable to find any acting to do, finally landed a fat part in a show. The actor, realizing that this was his one great chance, worked on the part with every bit of power and energy that he possessed.

He ate, slept and drank the part. He paid no attention to anything else. And as a result, his interpretation was regarded as a genuine work of art. But the management was very cold-blooded about it. Just before the show opened in New York, a big name was placed in the role—and the actor who had worked so laboriously was given the air.

A year later, after achieving something of a success on the air, this same actor was urged by a picture company to have a screen test. And the scene they wanted him to play in the test was a part of the role from which he had been fired! . . .

TRADE PICKS UP IN HOME BONDS

NEW YORK, Sept. 2.—(AP.)—Trading in bonds of the Home Owners' Loan Corporation, dealers report here, is proceeding satisfactorily and inquiries are said to be increasing daily.

Active trading in the bonds started at the beginning of the week, it was reported by Slattery Brothers, Inc., members of the New York Real Estate Securities Exchange and specialists in the new securities.

The bonds are described as legal for savings banks and acceptable under certain conditions in exchange for existing mortgages. The coupon is limited to 4 per cent and is exempt as to principal and interest from taxation, with limited exceptions.

The Home Owners' Loan Corporation, created by a special act of Congress, has an authorized capitalization of $2,000,000,000, of which $200,000,000 has been subscribed by the government. Interest on the bonds is guaranteed by the government. The bonds are issued in denominations of $50 and up.

Announcement was made recently that the Federal Home Bank Board would soon issue a statement concerning the investment value of the bonds.

NAVY NARRATIVES -:- Thrilling Stories of the Navy During War Times -:- By LIEUT. JIM HAYS

or the world. Every time I thought of the Cyclops and my shipmates down in South America, my disappointment grew more bitter.

Then, early in April, when the ice had disappeared, and off shore breezes smelled invitingly of springtime, the Orion loaded, just as the Cyclops had done, with a cargo for the Pittsburgh, the Raleigh, the Cincinnati and other ships at Bahia, Rio de Janeiro, Montevideo and Buenos Aires.

We were due to leave Norfolk on April 8. There was little to do the night before but sit in the Orion's wardroom playing cards, listening to the phonograph, or reading. I was lounging there with my fellow officers when a young lieutenant, accompanied by two marines, was ushered through the wardroom and into the captain's cabin.

The marines set down some bundles they were carrying and went out on deck again. The strange young officer remained in the captain's cabin for a long, uneasy hour, while my shipmates looked at me with raised eyebrows, as if to say:

"Well . . . here you go ashore again!"

I wondered whether I might not just as well begin to pack my clothes for another transfer.

But the captain finally escorted his visitor out on deck and returned to the wardroom alone. He paused at his cabin door, and leaned there against its frame for a while, looking thoughtfully at me, and I felt very uneasy.

There was something ominous in the captain's attitude. The other officers, sensing the same thing, paused in whatever they were doing at the time and waited for the captain to speak.

Lost With All Hands

"Mr. Hays," the captain said, presently, and quickly, "You ought to be thankful you are here! . . . And I grinned with relief.

"You bet I am, sir!" I assured him, "I thought that bird had come to relieve me . . . like the fellow did on the Cyclops the day she sailed!"

"And, by Joe I was going on this cruise if I had to stow away!" I said.

"It's the Cyclops I'm thinking about!" the captain said. "That young fellow just brought word from the bureau . . . the Cyclops is lost . . . with all hands!"

I was stunned.

The Cyclops had delivered her cargo in South America, and had taken on a cargo of manganese ore, at Bahia, Brazil, for the homeward voyage.

Ten days out of Bahia, she had put into Bridgetown, Barbados, the farthest east of the West Indies, to take on fresh water, and to cable to the Navy Department that she would arrive in Norfolk five days later . . . about March 12.

On the twelfth she had failed to arrive, and naval radio stations along the coast had tried to communicate with her, to ask her position and when she expected to make port.

She didn't answer! Day after day, increasingly insistent calls were broadcast; ships in her supposed locality were ordered to search for her, and all reported alike: her radio was stilled, and no sign of her could be found!

The Orion in Search

No enemy ships had appeared in that part of the South Atlantic, and reports from ships between Barbados and the States had reported the weather clear and calm throughout the month of March.

Now, in April, with the Cyclops three weeks overdue on only a five-day run, the Navy Department was distressed and puzzled. Still, it was hoped she would eventually turn up somewhere, and her disappearance was kept secret for awhile.

The Orion was to go South over the same course that the Cyclops should have taken North, and we were ordered to keep an especially sharp lookout for any signs of her. It seemed appropriate that the Orion should be the one to seek her lost sister-ship.

The Orion put out to sea from Norfolk on an early spring morning. We paused for a moment to drop the civilian pilot, two or three miles offshore at Cape Henry Lighthouse.

The captain and I were on the bridge together when we got under way again. "Full speed ahead!" he commanded, when the pilot skiff had pulled safely away from the ship, and with a flourish of the handles and much ringing of bells back aft in the engine room, I set the speed indicators at "Full."

Meanwhile, the captain had blown three long blasts on the Orion's deep, seagoing whistle, and the pilot boat, well astern now, answered our salute with three shrill toots. But the salute wasn't intended for that kind of pilot.

The captain was looking shoreward through his binoculars, a beaming smile lighting up his face. I turned my glasses in the same general direction, and there, beyond the sandy beach at the foot of Cape Henry Lighthouse was a tiny feminine figure waving something white over her head.

She knew of the fate of the Cyclops. She had hurried all the way down to the cape from Norfolk to wave the captain a last good-bye as the Orion headed into the open sea, on an identical voyage.

I stood a regular watch on the bridge from 8 to 12, morning and night. The fourth morning out of Norfolk, perhaps 400 miles to the north-and-east of Barbados, I had been on the bridge but a few minutes when word came down the speaking tube from the crows nest:

"Floating object . . . broad on the port bow!"

To the left of the Orion's bow, a thousands yards or so away, a shining object was flouncing lightly on the waves. I changed our course with a sharp swerve, to get a closer look at it, and it turned out to be a hollow copper, doughnut-shaped life preserver, several times the size of the common canvas-covered life rings, and peculiar to naval vessels.

Every Navy ship of any size carries at least two of these "Franklin Buoys," one on either side of the vessel, and placed on chutes so they can be quickly despatched in case of a man overboard.

There is a carbide torch attached to the float, that ignites when it strikes the water, so a man overboard at night has something to swim to while the ship maneuvers or lowers a lifeboat to pick him up.

Every such article carries a serial number to identify the ship from which it came, and my first impulse was to stop and pick it up. But it seemed too great a risk to invite a possible submarine attack.

We circled the buoy three times at half speed and tried to catch it with grappling hooks on the ends of lines. But our hooks were too small, and we finally abandoned the attempt, resuming our southward course.

A little before noon, in the same watch, one of those huge, oval shaped life rafts that I had helped place in the Cyclops' rigging bumped under the flare of the Orion' bow, whirled around and passed astern.

Her Fate Foreseen

Thirteen days out of Norfolk we left the deep blue of the tropical South Atlantic and entered the bright green waters of Bahia harbor, in Brazil. The Raleigh, one of our cruisers, lay at anchor there.

We lowered one of the Orion's motorboats, and the paymaster and I went over to the Raleigh to deliver a supply of money. In the Raleigh's wardroom, where we were invited for lunch, the officers all were eager to know if we had seen any signs or heard anything of the Cyclops.

They had bet each other, they said, when the Cyclops had passed close by the Raleigh on her way out of Bahia Harbor, that she would never reach the United States. We asked them why.

Her masts were whipping badly, the Raleigh's officers said, and she was shimmying so violently she seemed about to shake herself to pieces.

I told them that was a common occurrence when I was aboard the Cyclops. She would be steaming along serenely when, suddenly, her masts would begin to whip fore-and-aft, straining her radio antenna between them. More than once we had shaken the antenna down. She frightened you a little, at first, until you got used to it.

Sometimes, if you stood forward, or aft, and looked along her deck, you could see vibrations running the length of her hull, caterpillar-fashion. She would bend upward and downward at both ends like a fishing rod held by the middle.

After a number of such performances you became used to it, and if it happened during your watch on the bridge, you'd telephone the engine room and warn the engineer officer on watch, "Mind your engines! She's shimmying!" And soon her quaking would cease.

Why She Sank

That's easily understood. So long as her two powerful engines labored alternately, she rode along without a quiver. But now and then the two engines would fall in step, thrusting upward and downward together for several revolutions, sending a series of jolts the length of her hull, like a jerky automobile.

When the Cyclops was stuffed with a cargo of coal, her fits of shimmying were mild, but she would pretty nearly shake you out of your bunk, sometimes, when she was empty.

There really is no mystery about the Cyclops! We know there were no enemy ships in her neighborhood, and we know the tropical weather was mild and sunny, and the Caribbean Sea a gorgeous deep blue those early spring days, as the Cyclops plodded north, homeward bound.

By night the Southern Cross was lowering toward the southern horizon astern, and the familiar North Star and Dipper of home, unseen now for many months, was rising ahead, over the Cyclops' jackstaff.

Scurrying schools of fish stirred up phosphorescent spots in the night sea, and occasionally some great, swift fish shot across the Cyclops' bow, leaving a comet-like trail of phosphorescence behind it . . . frightening the men on watch, who, momentarily, thought it a torpedo!

My old shipmates who had wished me goodbye and good luck that winter noon in Norfolk, were on watch at their usual stations or pleasantly idling away their "watches below," happy in anticipation of arriving home again. And all was well.

Then, as a hundred other times, her engines, alternating rythmically, suddenly fell into step. Her bow and her stern whipped upward and downward, as usual.

This time there was no bulky cargo in her holds to absorb the vibration. The manganese ore, several times heavier than coal, lay but a few feet deep along her bottom and aggravated the whipping motion.

Fatigued from stress and strain, the Cyclops did what she had threatened to do a hundred times before.

Whether she folded up amidships like a jacknife, or snapped like a twig across your thumbs . . . she had no time to call for help.

Her radio antenna was instantly destroyed when she broke in two.

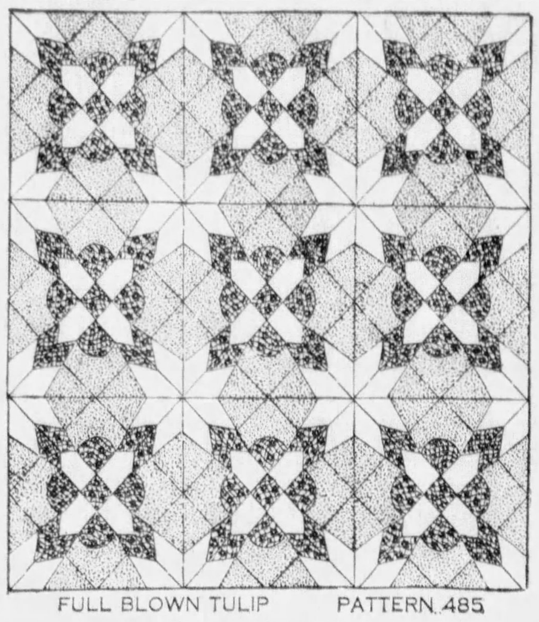
PATCHWORK QUILT PATTERN



FULL BLOWN TULIP PATTERN 485

By LAURA WHEELER

The open tulip was one of the flowers most popular with the old-time quiltmaker. She quaintly named it the Full-blown Tulip. Its simplicity of form undoubtedly suggested this simple flower-like block. The star-like shape adds to the beauty of the pattern and makes a pleasing contrast when the quilt is done in three materials, as illustrated here. The block is very simple to do and makes a very handsome quilt.

Pattern 485 comes to you with complete, simple instructions for cutting, sewing and finishing, together with yardage chart, diagram of quilt to help arrange the blocks for single and double bed size, and a diagram of block which serves as a guide for placing the patches and suggests contrasting materials.

Send 10c for this pattern to Pittsburgh Sun-Telegraph Needlecraft Department, 82 Eighth avenue, New York City.

The Junior Patrol Mail Box

Yessiree, he looked the farm all over again before he started back home to Pittsburgh, and he is on his way today. Soon he'll be back here, healthy and brown as a berry—all ready for a wonderful fall and winter of school and fun.

And he'll be more anxious than ever to help others, we'll bet. Of course, on the farm he has been helping this last month or two since he recovered from the measles, and he has been doing lots of little favors for people. But now he's all set to get going again with his Junior Patrol.

The boys down the river are almost home now—coming back to meet Junior. We hope all the members of the Junior Patrol have had just as good a time as Spike and Snuggins this summer.

Now, right below here, you'll see a dandy cartoon. It's by Robert F. Carson, who lives at R. F. D. No. 1, Irwin, Pa. He writes:

"I am sending two membership pledges. One is for my brother. I enjoy reading the comic strip and the Mail Box very much. My brother saves the comic strip and I save the Mail Box. It would be nice, I think, if you could have a comic page in the Pittsburgh Sun-Telegraph Sunday papers.

"I drew a picture of Bill, Snuggins and Spike, who are feeding a poor little dog that doesn't have a home. I think all Junior Patrol members should be kind to animals. Hurry and send our membership cards and emblems. We will be watching for them."

It's a really fine drawing, Robert—thanks a lot. We're sure that all the Junior Patrol members will be kind to animals, all right. Your emblems and cards are probably already on the way.

Ann Foley, of 339 Bower Hill road, Mt. Lebanon, is the captain of a new patrol and gets an armband. The name of her patrol is the NRA Junior Patrol and all the members have agreed to obey the laws and respect the clubhouse.

You know, fellows, that's a good idea about the clubhouse. Take care of property, fellows. Fellows who scribble on the walls of buildings and scratch woodwork, cut up school desks with knives and tear trees and flowers forget that people remember and dislike things like that—and that children who spoil beautiful things are not 100 per cent Junior Patrol members.

He can't bite me up here!
Sure, cause you can never tell when they might help you out.

MRS. FRISBY TRIES TO TRAMPLE HUSBAND IN DUST

WASHINGTON—Congressman Horace Frisby has appealed directly to the Army and Navy to protect him against what he calls "Cossackism" in America.

"It is high time," says Frisby, "that every livery stable in the land sign an agreement not to rent a horse to my ex-wife, who seems to take a strange delight in chasing me up and down the streets and trying to trample one of America's finest traditions in the dust."

Mrs. Frisby, attired in a becoming riding habit of black, has been patroling the streets with a banner advertising the law firm of Webster & Craig, well-known divorce attorneys.

The Labels Mean Not a Thing

Very interesting to watch the liquor advertising by air, eye or nose.

As the hardboiled extracts of rye, herbs and roots are not yet legitimate you must be careful how you voice more than 3.2 sentiment.

You can get it on a doctor's prescription. But we prefer to get it unaided and consult the doctor the next day. We don't even care if he violates our hospitality by bringing an ambulance along.

Some restaurants advertise on the menu, "Try our Rhode Island clam chowder with a dash of Prof. Todbotter's neuralgia cure. Guaranteed to sooth the nerves, curl the hair and press the clothes."

We all know that Prof. Todbotter's pain solution ain't Maj. Gray's rare old chutney. We are hep to the fact that it is Scotch of the purest ray serene, with delicate beads around the rim, a smoky odor that would ring a three-alarm fire gong and a taste that will make your bridgework open to let a boat go through.

And, even though the advice on the menu is to mix the chowder with the healing anodyne, we are too wise for that. You don't pour Prof. Todbotter's neuralgia varnish in the chowder. If you pour anywhere you pour the chowder in the cuspidor. We always take our oils and paints straight.

Not that anybody seems to care about the deception. There seems to have been a general let up in enforcement and a general let down in locomotion. No bartender expects you to order six or seven rounds of oyster stews just to get the crackers.

But until 1934 you will have to call for something different in order to get what you want. And it is no guessing contest. Just walk up and place your straw hat on the mahogany upside down. Tell the lad to fill it up with parsley drowned in tomato juice. You'll get rye.

The actual words mean nothing. It's the code. The barkeep judges you by the rougish twinkle in your eye and the speedy slant of your lapels. Just waggle your head from side to side, tilt your arms akimbo and do a little old Dublin reel. Anybody would know that you ain't ordering mush and milk. The barkeep gets out some gin and bitters because he knows that anything else would be tossed back into his waxed mustache.

After the new year you will be legally entitled to use the old time honored nomeclature for the bottles will be on the shelf. And even then words will not be essential if you are still sober enough to point.

Japan's Demand for Former German Islands Is a Threat to the U. S.

THERE IS METHOD in the madness which prompts Japan to challenge, as she has recently done, the French occupation of seven small islands off the Philippine archipelago.

These islands lie outside the line of American ownership. They are a part of a large group of coral reefs which rise not more than eight feet above the sea. None of them is more than three-quarters of a mile long.

By challenging French occupation of these dots on the ocean, Japan is presumably seeking to start a dispute with France that will enable her to negotiate for French support for another piece of Japanese madness.

This is the madness that led the Japanese Ministry of the Navy, a few months ago, to put the world on notice that Japan's withdrawal from the League of Nations would not disturb Japan's mandate over the former German colonies in the Pacific lying north of the equator.

★ ★ ★

THESE 1,600 ISLANDS have an estimated population of not more than 100,000. They were ceded by Germany at the close of the great war to the allied and associated powers—Great Britain, France, Italy, Japan and the United States.

Title to these islands rests with these five powers jointly. The mandate to administer these islands, subject to certain restrictions stipulated in the Treaty of Versailles, was assigned to Japan.

By the treaty of peace with Germany, the United States retained all the rights in which she shared as a member of the allied and associated powers—including America's share in the sovereignty over the former German colonies.

Japan is apparently getting ready to lay claim to exclusive sovereignty over these former German islands, that she may annex them and fortify them and drive a wedge between the Philippine Islands and the Hawaiian Islands—the two main American bases in the Pacific.

★ ★ ★

WITH THESE naval bases, well fortified, Japan will then be in striking distance of her next objective, the Philippines and the Hawaiian Islands.

There are several reasons why Japan wants the Philippines. A glance at the map of Asia shows that the territory that is Japan today stretches along the coast of Asia like a hand that is without fingers. Possession of the Philippines would put the fingers on Japan's hand. With that hand, Japan would then have a grip on the continent of Asia no single power could break.

Having taken the Philippines, Japan's territory then would stretch all along the coast of Asia and her military and naval bases would give Japan complete command of the China Sea.

There is another reason why Japan wants the Philippines. Japan knows there is more high-grade iron ore in that archipelago than in all China and Japan. China has low-grade iron ore but very little that is industrially workable in competition with the industries of other nations having such an abundant supply of high-grade ore as enriches the Philippines.

★ ★ ★

IF THE Philippine Islands were in the possession of Great Britain, France, Germany, Italy or Russia today, Japan would have to go to war to get them.

But the United States—as William Randolph Hearst pointed out in a recent letter to the editor of this newspaper—is actually "helping the Japanese" to acquire the Philippines "through our political corruption and stupidity."

The late and unlamented Seventy-Second Congress practically "sold out" American sovereignty in the Philippine Islands at the dictation of a sugar lobby representing American investors in Cuban sugar properties, continental sugar properties and Hawaiian sugar properties.

And the United States is helping Japan to absorb Hawaii by permitting the Hawaiian sugar oligarchy to dominate that territory and exploit it as an Asiatic colony until they can get their price for their properties and sell them to the Japanese, whom they have helped to colonize the Hawaiian Islands.

★ ★ ★

IF THE United States follows the supine policy in regard to Japan's preposterous claim to exclusive sovereignty over the former German colonies in the Pacific, which has been followed in regard to the Philippines and Hawaii, we shall permit this claim to go undisputed. In that way we shall help Japan to drive a wedge between the Philippines and Hawaiian Islands that will enable her to absorb both of these possessions "at the psychological time."

This would give Japan "the mastery of the Pacific," domination of the continent of Asia and probably victory over the United States in the war that would inevitably follow.

An Inescapable Duty

The Commonwealth Must Not Fail the Public Schools—Brief Comments on Local News.

Gov. Pinchot states that because of lack of funds some of the school boards in the rural sections of the state will be unable this year to furnish a high school education to the boys and girls of their districts and some may not be able to keep the elementary schools open through the year unless special aid is provided. The state should provide the necessary aid.

The constitution of Pennsylvania (article X, section 1) directs the General Assembly to "provide for the maintenance and support of a thorough and efficient system of public schools, wherein all the children of this commonwealth above the age of six years may be educated." That is an inescapable obligation, and Gov. Pinchot would be justified in calling the Legislature into special session to deal with the crisis.

It is especially regrettable that high school education is to be curtailed, because there will be a greater demand for it than ever before. It is estimated that the NRA ban on child labor will result in the return to school on a full-time basis of 15,000 Pennsylvania boys and girls of high school age who otherwise would be working part of the time.

It is hard to see how another special session of the Legislature can be avoided; for in addition to the needs of the schools the question of regulating the sale of liquor soon will have to be considered. It now seems certain that prohibition will be repealed before Christmas. Is Pennsylvania to be caught unprepared, as it was when the sale of beer again became legal?

The County Commissioners have held up payment of bills amounting to $295.95 presented by the Flood Commission of Pittsburgh until the expenditures have been explained in detail. Such vigilance is not only perfectly justified, but is worthy of the highest praise, even though, as in the present case, the commission called upon for an explanation bears an excellent reputation.

Mayor John S. Herron continues to show com- mendable zeal in pushing the Flood Commission's plan to have storage reservoirs built by the United States government at the headwaters of the Allegheny and Monongahela to regulate stream flow. "There is a tide in the affairs of men which, taken at the flood, leads on to fortune." Herron evidently believes that tide, with respect to the protection of Pittsburgh from the rivers, is here.

The Pittsburgh Motor Club complains that Penn- sylvania was shown by a recent survey to have only 83 miles of state highway with three or four traffic lanes, as compared with 1,104 miles in New York, 333 miles in New Jersey and 177 miles in Ohio. Desirable as it is to have the comparatively little traveled rural roads paved, the work should not be done at the expense of the great through routes of heavy traffic.

Director Edward G. Lang, of the Department of Public Works, announces that the Mt. Washington roadway extension, built at a cost of $900,000, and connecting the Liberty Tunnel approach with the new South Tenth Street Bridge, will be opened to the public September 16. It is to be hoped the city will soon be able to start work on other great improvements, to be financed with the aid of the NRA.

In view of the obvious unwillingness of A. B. de Castrique, District Attorney of Beaver County, to prosecute the county officials charged with unlawful deportation of 46 Negroes, the proposal of Robert Vann, deputy United States attorney general, to take the case to the United States District Court, has much to commend it. If the Federal Court has jurisdiction, there is more likelihood of obtaining a fair trial there than in Beaver County.

The Beaver County prosecutor has certainly not added to his laurels by his conduct in this shameful case. The bitter words with which Gov. Pinchot has censured him were fully deserved. If he had been alive to his duty, de Castrique would have acted long ere this; for it was obvious to anyone with common sense that in forcing the Negroes into trucks and carrying them far from their homes a crime was committed.

If the theory of evolution is true, was there a time when men, or men's ancestors, lacked souls? The subject is discussed in an interesting illustrated article in the American Weekly, the big magazine to be distributed with the Sunday Sun-Telegraph. A Philadelphia boy soprano who can reach a higher note than Lily Pons is the subject of another article.

In the past decades of our industrial progress this country has suffered from periodical depressions.

On each occurrence one of the factors that have helped to pull the nation out of the pit has been INVENTIONS—new industries to create employment and expand trade.

Right now America has such an industry—one that has survived the experimental stages, that has more than demonstrated its utility and its soundness and that is ready to go ahead.

That new industry is AVIATION. In the era ahead it will be ranked as an ESSENTIAL industry. Important in commerce, in travel and in national defense, it can contribute immensely to economic recovery if it be given intelligent and patriotic governmental support and supervision.

But aviation must be rescued from politics at Washington if its potential values are to be realized.

The nation cannot fly back to prosperity in a pork barrel.

When Love Goes Modern

About the only time that a man begins to take any real interest in the workings of a woman's heart is when he discovers some other man trying to pick the lock.

* * *

No man was ever so absorbed in watching the sun set on an old love affair that he couldn't cast at least one eye over his shoulder at the rising star of a new flirtation.

* * *

A bore is a man who is so busy thinking of his next brilliant remark or contemplating his own clever thoughts that nothing a woman says gets past the tympanum.

* * *

The first kiss brings a lump in a man's throat—but it's the last kiss that always leaves a lump in a woman's throat.

* * *

A man who never keeps regular hours is as exasperating as a watch that never keeps time. Yet a woman will bravely marry him, on the optimistic theory that she can some day "regulate" him and keep him running straight.

One hundred and eighty pounds of avoirdupois and a 30-inch waistline never robbed a woman of her longing to be cuddled and called foolish petnames, when she's feeling sorry for herself.

* * *

There is nothing quite so pitiful as the sight of a man in the hands of a clever haberdashery salesman—unless it is a man in a big department store, looking for the "Notion Counter."

The only way for an attractive, easy-going man to protect himself against the woman is to MARRY one of them and use her as an emergency-brake.

NEW YORK DAY BY DAY

By O. O. McIntyre

NEW YORK, Sept. 2.—Purely personal piffle: I judge small towns by awnings and have to know a person a long time to look them smack in the eyes. I have been bitten 20 times by dogs but always accidentally during frolics. My happiest years have been after 40. I have never been a pall bearer.

For eight years I played poker with the same crowd and never won at a single session. The greatest example of theatrical pressagenting was Gilda Gray. Stevenson gave the best advice to writers with: "Oh, Lord, teach us what not to say." The only housekeeping job I do worth a hoot is dusting.

Toupees on those little stands in a hair-dresser's window make me chuckle. My favorite perfume is named for a street in Paris—Avenue Matignon. On four different newspapers I have worked with a different Harry Martin. Loretta Young is my newest crush in the films.

Vina Delmar has written the most realistic descriptions of Bronx walk-up flat life. Grenville Kleiser is the only writer I know to use the word "otiose." Will Mahoney, an Irishman, gives the best imitation of a Scottish accent. Donning a stiff bosomed shirt always makes me lose my temper.

* * *

I hand letters I suspect are unpleasant to my wife to read first. There is no more fun than listening to Sid Solomon discuss New York's lorgnette focusers. Frank Munsey, when alive, always struck me as the lonesomest man in New York. I shoo flies out the window instead of killing them.

* * *

I rode in the same compartment from Paris to Antwerp once with the famous spy, Mati Hari. The place that fascinated me more than any other during childhood was the Cincinnati zoo. The first place I lived in New York was a boarding house at 319 West 72nd street. Norman Kerry had the most devil-may-care mustache in the movies. The most affable employees meeting the public are filling station attendants. Walking up spiral stairs I think of the guillotine. The name Fitz suggests caper and Eileen, moonlight. Robert Quillen has the best size-up of small town.

* * *

I have not tasted 3.2 beer. Richard Harding Davis is my reportorial hero and Charles R. Barnes, though not nationally known, is to me the most gifted columnist. I've never failed to get a smile out of Ted Cook and Bugs Baer. And never longed for "a little place of my own" in the country. For graceful phrasing few excel John Anderson, dramatic critic. Add fascinating aromas: The smell of a country weekly shop. The best beans ever eaten were, and why not?, at Soisson's, France.

* * *

Two books I'm always vowing to read but never have are Gautier's "Mlle. De Maupin" and Gissing's "New Grub Street." The greatest drudgery is rewriting a magazine article that failed to click. No sense of peace like a country lane after a summer rain. I frequently dream of a rivulet of wheat flowing from my hip. I visited M. Quad during his last days. Of all readers the only one calling regularly was the attendant in a New York poolroom. In East Liverpool, O., I knew a red-headed Irishman named Issac Cohen. Ishbel Ross is becoming a foremost novelist.

* * *

Given a headlined clipping from any established paper in cities of more than 50,000 I immediately identity the publication. I also do a swell match trick and am kind to birds. I saw a smart alec, drunk, walk from one post to another on a ship rail during a violent storm. My wife sneezes like a 6-month-old baby. Bustling streets like Nassau in New York and Essex off the Strand in London are more fascinating than wide, precise boulevards. Every ship shoving off gives me eerie intimation of mortality.

* * *

Marriages such as the Hutton-Mdivani alliance lather a fine rage. The only time I really suffered from heat was August 2, 1933. The greatest change of New York in 20 years is to see men and women bicycling and roller skating along Fifth avenue. I once named a New York roof garden "The Hurricane Deck."

* * *

William Allen White's famous "What's the Matter With Kansas?" struck me as unusually dull reading. But his editorial on the accidental death of his daughter, very little bespoke, was a masterpiece. I like to eat chipped dried beef to be thirsty all day, and I used to cry out loud when they whipped "Uncle Tom."

The Jewish Pageant—Don't Miss It

Here Is a Suggestion.

SPINOZA, PHILOSOPHER, GREATEST JEWISH INTELLECT

At the Polo Grounds in New York City on September 14 there will be held a great Jewish pageant showing "The Romance of a People."

There will be reviewed the history of a great race, reaching far back into time, never suppressed, never discouraged, never overwhelmed in spite of bitter racial and religious hatred and cruelty such as Hitler himself could not conceive.

The pageant will be interesting and enlightening. All money received will be used to move persecuted Jews from Germany to Palestine.

The pageant will have many surprises. Here, meanwhile, is a pageant suggestion, partly illustrated:

SPINOZA, the greatest Jewish intellect in all history—Einstein not excepted.

EINSTEIN, greatest Jewish scientist in history, called by scientists of all nations the greatest living mathematician and the peer of the great Newton himself.

HEINE, the greatest Jewish poet outside of the Old Testament. Isaiah and whoever wrote the Book of Job were greater poets. If you do not know Heine's poetry so much the worse for you.

ROTHSCHILD, THE RICHEST

DISRAELI, ABLEST STATESMAN

MAIMONIDES, familiarly known to millions of little Jewish boys as Rambam, a very great teacher. He wisely established himself as physician of the Khedives of Egypt, where nobody could bother him and he was free to translate the Greek philosophers into Hebrew, inventing new Hebrew words, as he needed them, without being disturbed.

DISRAELI, prime minister of England, who brought back the Island of Cyprus from Berlin and handed it to England and made Queen Victoria Empress of India. He was a professing Christian—could not have been prime minister of England otherwise. How far in the Christianity went is uncertain. Heine had to be a Christian by profession to pass his examinations.

ROTHSCHILD, head of the richest Jewish family, but by no means the most important, financed many governments.

We should print a picture of the best fighter among the Maccabees, who represent the fighting spirit of the Jews, but we have not the picture.
